Carmelite turns childhood dream into a career

BY KIRSTIE WILDE

WHEN SHE was a little girl, Sheri Moreau dreamed of creating a garden full of butterflies. She would collect them, make them her pets and spend her days admiring their diaphanous beauty.

But of course, it was just a silly girl's dream. When it came time to make a living, Sheri Moreau joined the Navy.

She achieved lofty status in the military

ERRANT DRIVER RUNS OVER TOURIST ON MISSION STREET

■ Illinois man in serious condition; driver cited for minor offense

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A CROWDED sidewalk next to Mission Street was suddenly transformed into a gruesome scene of panic Tuesday when an Acura veered onto the sidewalk, striking a man and grotesquely injuring his leg.

Joseph Parisi, from St. Charles, Illinois, was walking just a few steps ahead of his wife and two daughters in front of the clothing store Georgiou, near the corner of Ocean Avenue.

Just as Parisi walked by, John Kumar of San Diego was attempting to pull his 1997 Acura head first into an available parking space. Kumar's foot slipped from the brake onto the accelerator and sent the car onto the sidewalk, hitting Parisi.

Parisi was standing next to a concrete planter when the car struck him,

158 Herald workers offered jobs, forced to sign away job security

By KIRSTIE WILDE

THE MASS loss-of-jobs feared by the 235 Herald newspaper employees is not going to happen.

According to Mindi Keirnan, Vice President of Knight Ridder Newspapers, 158 current employees have already been offered jobs, and all but one have accepted.

"There's no evidence that we turned our back on the workers or the community," said Keirnan. "We had 200 people apply for jobs from outside the Herald, and we only hired six of them."

She said they are still in the middle of the hiring process, and will be offering more jobs to Herald employees over the next several

Judge Silver makes Clint's day, upholds Cañada Woods

By STEPHEN BLOCH

SUPERIOR COURT Judge Richard Silver has ruled in favor of Clint Eastwood's Cañada Woods North housing and golf course development, rejecting a Sierra Club lawsuit that sought to halt the project.

He also lifted the injunction placed on the project in June — which means that construction can begin immediately on the project's 34 residences, golf clubhouse, guest rooms for members, equestrian center and employee housing.

Eastwood told The Pine Cone that the Sierra Club does not care about open space, they just care about winning political points. "They don't have any qualms about spreading false information, filing false police reports claiming that we were bulldozing streams when we weren't, and they just hope to make you spend so much money you go away. The taxpayers end up getting the bad deal."

Burden of proof

In a ruling handed down yesterday, the Judge said that the Supervisors' actions approving the project "are presumed to be correct, and the burden is on the Sierra Club to prove otherwise."

Sierra Club attorney Keith Sugar had argued that the environmental impact report was faulty, because it didn't address

Ventana Inn offered for sale

By PAUL MILLER

THE WORLD-famous Ventana Inn of Big Sur has been put up for sale by its owners, the Transamerica Corporation of San Francisco.

"The present owners view the property as a treasure and are focussed on finding a buyer who will continue to operate it with the same values," Los Angeles real estate broker Steve McKenzie told The Pine Cone this week. His agency, Eastdil Realty, has the listing to sell the Inn, and "will be marketing it to a limited number of qualified potential buyers," McKenzie said. The asking price will not be publicly disclosed, he said.

Salinas Memorial on path to cutting edge in heart care

■ Expansion to serve more cardiac patients

By TAMARA GRIPPI

FIRST IN A SERIES OF TWO ARTICLES

AFTER SUFFERING from a massive coronary nearly a year ago, Ken Shaffer is still amazed by the implanted "defibrillator" that saved his life by regulating his heartbeat. What's more amazing is that Shaffer credits the device for saving his life a total of nine times.

The device — about the size of a package of cigarettes — is designed to automatically shock the heart and stabilize the heartbeat when it becomes too fast.

The defibrillator — emerging as the next generation of the pacemaker — is one of several cutting edge technologies offered through Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital's 10-year-old heart center. The hospital is gearing up to open its expanded heart center in November.

Heart disease is the number one killer in the United States, as well as in Monterey County, said Susan Marscellas, public relations director for the hospital. Salinas Memorial is the only hospital in the central coast area that provides a full service heart program.

Otherwise, patients would have to travel to Stanford or San Francisco. "It doesn't make sense to send people out of the community (for heart treatment)," Marscellas said.

The expanded center will feature two additional catheterization labs. Every year the hospital performs about 2,400 catheter-

Friendly 'chat' with a raccoon backfires

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A CARMEL man stepped onto his deck at 11 p.m. late last month, asked a raccoon sitting six feet away, "What are you doing out so late?" and was amazed by the animal's answer: it rushed over, grabbed his ankle with both hands and sank its teeth into his calf.

"I always chat with the animals" (in order to put them at ease), said bite victim Allen Kollmann. The raccoon, however, had no problem making himself at home.

"He decided he was going to have a late night snack," Kollmann said. After inflicting a serious wound on Kollmann's leg, the raccoon backed off, but only to return for more. Kollmann figures that the animal "came back for dessert."

Kollmann hit the raccoon with a stick a few times and it finally relented. "He sauntered away as if he didn't have a care in the world," Kollman said.

Kollmann wrapped his badly bleeding leg in a sock and went into the hospital for treatment.

After witnessing the animal's strange behavior, Kollmann is convinced that it must have been rabid. Kollmann received a shot of the "rabies immune globulin," a protein to provide immediate protection against rabies. He also began his five-part rabies vaccination series — shots given in the arm over

Police & Sheriff's Log

Picture frame used to repel sexual advances

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Department for the week ending Saturday, August 16, 1997.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 10

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Two illegal campsites on Carmel Beach. Warning issued.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: San Francisco man was playing violin on Mission near Ocean and advertising his album. Advised of municipal code. Requested permission to play for free and serenade the public which was granted.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Woman on Carmelo was sweeping her driveway when she fell and rolled down to the street, possibly injuring her hip. Carmel Fire and ambulance responded and transported woman to CHOMP for further diagnosis.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Man found a lost dog in the downtown area. He held the dog and then turned it over to police. Dispatch attempting to contact owner.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Man had an apparent seizure and fell. Officer responded and helped return man to his wheelchair. No medical treatment requested.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Complaint of a loud party on Santa Rita near 2nd. On-going problem. Contacted renter and advised him of the complaint. Observed a keg of beer on the second floor deck. Advised that he was under age — the keg was removed by an officer and the party shut down.

Carmel Valley: A woman at McCarthy Rd. advised that her daughter's friend, a 16-year-old juvenile, was getting annoying phone calls at her residence. It was later determined that the friend was playing on the phone with another 15-year-old juvenile who lived in Pacific Grove. The two juveniles were using star-69 to call each other.

Carmel Valley: A subject reported that a person checked out of their room and did not return that day. They claimed that the key was left in the room. The subject added that the room was left "a mess" and he had not been completely through it.

Pebble Beach: A man with Pebble Beach Security reported an unknown person had given him a pager that was found on the beach. It was placed into evidence until owner can be located.

Carmel Valley: A woman at Dorris Drive had a verbal argument with her husband.

Carmel Valley: A woman at Carmel Valley Rd. reported that a subject was intoxicated and would not leave her home. Upon arrival officer convinced the man that he should spend the night at his own home, two buildings away. No further action taken.

MONDAY, AUGUST 11

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Several people talking loudly at 4 a.m. outside restaurant. Also, three small plants were removed from hanging pots at the front door of the restaurant.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Man on Camino Real near 7th suffering from extreme anxiety and paranoia. He decided he needed professional help and was given a ride to CHOMP to speak to the crisis team.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: False ID confiscated and destroyed from liquor store.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Two people arguing at Carpenter and Highway 1 over who would stand at the intersection. Advised both to make a decision and be calm and quiet.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Assistance provided to two ladies at Del Mar locked out of their vehicle. AAA called.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of blocked roadway on Dolores near 13th. Two portable classrooms being transported to the River School. Carmel Unified School personnel helping with the transport. No further assistance required.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Received a new patrol car (a Ford Crown Victoria). Vehicle is being prepared for duty by Department of Public Works.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Call from Hawaii — wallet found of vacationing Carmel resident. Will check our records.

Carmel Valley: A woman called to report that a table had been taken from the Cachagua Community Center by a woman. The reporting party said that if the table was returned, no charges would be filed. After the officer spoke with the woman, she agreed to return the table.

Pebble Beach: Reporting party states that he placed his organizer on top of his car at 17 Mile Dr. and Palmero and forgot about it. He then proceeded to drive to Salinas. After he arrived at the gas station on Davis Rd. he realized his mistake. All bank cards have been canceled. Case closed.

Big Sur: Patrol observation of an old cab-over camper dumped at a roadside near Hurricane Point. CHP officer learned who the owner was; a transient was contacted at a pub and agreed to remove the camper.

Carmel area: A man at 7th reported that a rifle was stolen from his garage while he was away on vacation. No suspect information.

Carmel area: Officer responded to a report of a female Alzheimers patient clubbing a male Alzheimers patient with a picture frame at Valley Wy. This was apparently in response to the male making unwanted sexu-izations — the main test used to determine if a patient has blockage in valves or in a coronary artery, according to Dr. Gregory Spowart, an invasive cardiologist at Salinas Memorial.

Siemens, the company which is installing the new catheterization centers, researched all available equipment for three years in order to build the facility, Marscellas said.

Science helping medicine

Last week hospital executives, board members and medical staff took a tour of NASA's Ames research center to find out about advances that could transform the way surgery is approached in the future.

NASA has a history of contributing to medical science. One of Salinas Memorial's critical heart technologies now in use is the left ventricular assist device, which was originally developed at NASA.

The device, a heart pump that takes over heart functions while the heart itself recovers from failure, was originated at NASA's Johnson Space Center. The pump is based on the design of the pump on the space shuttle's main engine.

A man working at the space center, who was also suffering from heart problems, decided to build a better heart pump based on the pump of the space shuttle's main engine.

"Our role is competing on the national level," Marscellas said of Salinas Memorial's future. The hospital performs 400 open heart surgeries a year, according to Spowart. The hospital plans to provide another cardiac surgery unit to handle more bypass and valve replacements.

One important, relatively new device that the hospital currently employs is a "stent," a special wire used to temporarily hold blood vessels open. The stent increases the success of angioplasty — the procedure that dilates the coronary artery with a small balloon, Spowart said.

Other critical treatments offered by the hospital include rotablators and the atherectomy — the "roto rooters of heart surgery" which remove the "plaque" or cholesterol from the arteries.

"This heart center is state-of-the-art," Shaffer said. "It's a place you don't mind being sick in."

'This heart center is state-of-the-art. It's a place you don't mind being sick in.'

— Ken Shaffer,
Heart patient

For Shaffer, the heart treatment he's received allows him to get on with his life. "It's like carrying a paramedic around inside you," he said of his implanted defibrillator.

Shaffer participates in a support group at the hospital in which 30 patients with defibrillators meet and share stories. The hospital offers a variety of support groups for heart patients including stress management.

The hospital hopes to accommodate even more heart patients through its expansion. As part of the grand opening next January, the hospital will host a 16-day NASA exhibit featuring various panels on biomedicine and technological advancements.

BUTTERFLY

— when she retired last year, her rank was lieutenant commander of the Naval Post Graduate School. In January, the Carmel resident was ready for a new career. She decided to create a garden full of butterflies.

Six figures possible

Moreau's tiny butterfly farm is tucked in a room at the back of her Carmel Woods home.

Her operation is small, but definitely growing, with a 625-square-foot indoor garden under construction in Carmel Valley. She has researched her childhood hobby through the years, and learned of a surprising number of people who make their livings from the lovely Lepidoptera.

"There are butterfly farmers making six-figure incomes," says Moreau. "You'd be surprised at the number of celebrations where live butterflies are requested." Consumers are willing to pay a pretty penny, between $4 and $5 dollars apiece for each insect.

Moreau explained that wedding guests love to use butterflies instead of tossing rice on the bride and groom. "When the butterflies are released from my refrigerated packets, they often sit on the guest's hand for a moment or two to get their bearings. Then they are drawn to the brightest thing in the room, which is usually the bride!"

The butterflies often stay around for several days before flying away, especially if there is a good source of nectar nearby. "I shipped two dozen Monarchs to an actress in Beverly Hills, who said most of the butterflies were still in her yard a week later," said Moreau.

Monarchs are especially hardy, she says, and can easily live without food for a week in the refrigerator if they are well-fed and exercised beforehand.

"When they drink, you can actually see them puff up. If they aren't interested, I gently unroll their proboscis with a toothpick and touch it to the food. They drink it right up," she explained.

When they are refrigerated, they go into a kind of "suspended animation" until they are released at the ceremony.

A friend of Moreau's did an experiment to see how long Monarchs can survive in the fridge. "He fed them once a week, and they were still fine after six months of moist refrigeration," she said. "He got tired of the study at that point and let them all go."

Uplifting the spirit

Many of Moreau's customers buy the farm-raised butterflies for birthdays, quinceñeras (the traditional Mexican party for 15-year-old girls) and even funerals.

"I just shipped five dozen Monarchs for a funeral in Oregon," she said. "It was a tragic case of a woman who was murdered. The thank-you letter her family sent to me after the ceremony was so beautiful it made me weep."

She says the sight of the butterflies can truly lift the human spirit. Many families love to hang the chrysalises on their Christmas tree, and it's possible to time them to hatch on Christmas day, according to Moreau. She also supplies cocoons to schools, and to people who simply want a pet butterfly . . . temporarily.

"A Monarch can live six weeks if it is protected from the predators and harsh conditions of the wild," she said.

Unless it is one of a migratory "over wintering generation" that can live up to 9 months. A Mourning Cloak can live three months in captivity. Some other species only live a day or two.

Milkweed is the only food that the monarch caterpillar will eat, so Moreau has thousands of milkweed plants growing in her backyard and in the valley. She also grows passion flowers, which are the host plant of the gulf fritillary caterpillar, as well as other plants to sustain the larvae of anise swallowtails, red admirals and painted ladies. She painstakingly babysits her tiny hatchling caterpillars, supplying them with their favorite foods and changing their "litter box" regularly. When they metamorphose into butterflies, Moreau serves them nectar from her lantana, verbena and penstemon flowers. She keeps her farm a humid 80 degrees.

Moreau grows and ships only native California insects. She cannot raise the rare Smith's blue butterfly (which is extinct everywhere on the Peninsula except for Seaside, according to biologist Vern Yadon) because there is a federal fine for tampering with an endangered species without a special Fish and Game permit. Moreau has California and federal insect permits to farm and ship her butterflies.

What she does not have, yet, is her final Monterey County permit to occupy that garden dreamt of long ago.

The ways of government can be as mysterious as the metamorphosis of a gossamer mourning cloak from a hairy black worm. Moreau had already announced that her Mariposa de Carmel Butterfly Garden and Vivarium in Carmel Valley would be open for a "sneak preview" this Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. That was before she learned that she could be fined $2500 by the county for allowing the public to view her garden before the final permit is granted.

"We have our preliminary approval, the inspectors have visited the site, and we expect our final permit any day," she told The Pine Cone Wednesday.

But until it comes, Moreau's garden will be strictly a private affair.

Bracing for fallout: County officials worry, but want to make welfare reform work

By PAUL WOLF

THE STATE welfare reform package signed by Gov. Pete Wilson will have profound effects — for better and for worse — on the lives of hundreds of families on the Peninsula and in Monterey County.

Consequently, county officials and legislators now are asking themselves three questions:

■ Can enough job training and job creation take place in time for the county's 6,000-plus welfare-receiving adults who are losing their entitlements?

■ Can the county budget stand up to the increased need for child care, transportation, social services and a local "safety net" when the state and federal governments have bowed out?

■ Will the community unite to ensure that welfare reform is a success and not a disaster?

"When these families can no longer receive the welfare benefits they are used to, what is going to happen to them?" asked Assemblyman Fred Keeley, D-Boulder Creek, who two weeks ago was on the losing side of a 64-11 Assembly vote supporting AB 1542, signed by Wilson on Monday.

"They are going to end up either more destitute or even on the street," Keeley predicted.

Even state Sen. Bruce McPherson, R-Santa Cruz, who voted for the welfare reform bill last week, admitted that even the most successful, enterprising counties "will not be able to get the welfare rolls down to zero." Inevitably, some people will not be able to find work, he said.

some people will not be able to find work, he said.

That is why McPherson believes the state must not abdicate all responsibility to the counties and must pursue legislation that will help them with their new burdens. "This is a huge changeover we are going through," he said.

"Initially, you can say this is good because able-bodied people will see there is no free lunch, but the real challenge is going to be: Can we make available the child care, the transportation and everything else?" said Simon Salinas, chairman of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Salinas took comfort in a recent move by Wal-Mart in Salinas to hire dozens of welfare recipients. But little bits of progress do not comfort Keeley: There are currently not enough new jobs being created, even in boom time, to accommodate all the unemployed and governmentally dependent, the Assemblyman said.

"We now have a million unemployed and 450,000 on welfare, but in a good year, only about 350 jobs are created," Keeley said. "To me, that means we've built a pretty good airplane with a wonderful control panel and fuselage, but no wings."

Keeley argued the accompanying provisions to spend $5 million for job creation "is not a serious commitment."

Meanwhile, McPherson, just-finished with intensive Senate budget haggling, said the state is pouring tens of millions of new dollars into child care and law-enforcement programs — all of which will help the counties.

In the short run, the senator said, the quest for expanding individual self-sufficiency will not save the state any money. In the long run, it can work with everyone's cooperation. His Senate colleagues overwhelmingly agreed, passing the legislation 33-5.

The legislation, called CalWORKS, or the California Work Opportunity and Responsibility to Kids, put California in sync with the federal reforms approved by Congress and President Clinton last year.

Key provisions of the welfare-reform overhaul include 18- and 24-month time limits for welfare recipients, who must immediately show they are working toward employment and further education.

The state provisions — encapsulated in CalWORKS' 271 pages — provide for benefits for children and the disabled, according to Marie Glavin, director of the county's Department of Social Services.

The county has roughly 6,200 adult and 15,000 children getting "AFDC," aid for families with dependent children.

She said her department, and various private and public agencies will be locked in serious discussions over the next four months to develop a plan of attack to make welfare-reform work in Monterey County.

The problems are lack of jobs, lack of support services and lack of a safety net for those who fail to become self-sufficient.

"We are very much concerned about those who do not fit the requirements for receiving benefits under this bill," Glavin said. "There are going to be some people who cannot move into the job market, for reasons of mental health, child care needs or other issues."

Carmel City Administrator Jere Kersnar said it would be pure speculation to guess what the impacts will be on the more affluent parts of the county, such as Pebble Beach and Carmel. As for the fiscal impacts, Potter, whose turf includes Carmel, much of Monterey Peninsula, Big Sur and nearly all of Carmel Valley, is worried.

"We are going to have to be as entrepreneurial as we can," Potter said, warning that the county must find new revenue to pay for essential services. "The counties just don't have the money. The concept of welfare reform is great, but the reality of welfare reform is another matter."

Potter said society as a whole "has shifted its costs" to the counties, whether or not the groundwork has been laid for the change. "It's an experiment, but it's an experiment with people's lives."

Supervisor Salinas said the county's $389 million budget includes only a small percentage for discretionary spending, which would allow for programs like job training. New taxes or other forms of revenue, which are unlikely to be warmly received by the voters, will be necessary, he said.

"We have to recognize it is in everyone's interest to take care of this problem — the residents and business," he said. "Otherwise, these people are going to be sleeping on your doorsteps."

Rancho San Carlos' water supply playing hard-to-get

'You'd need to drill 2,500 wells to reliably pump 10,000 acre-feet. That would cost (at least) $125 million.'

— Tom Gray, Rancho San Carlos

By KIRSTIE WILDE

WHY NOT buy Rancho San Carlos and use its huge underground water supply to solve the Peninsula's water problems?

That was the question asked at the water board meeting Monday night, in a letter from Friends of the Monterey County Regional Park District.

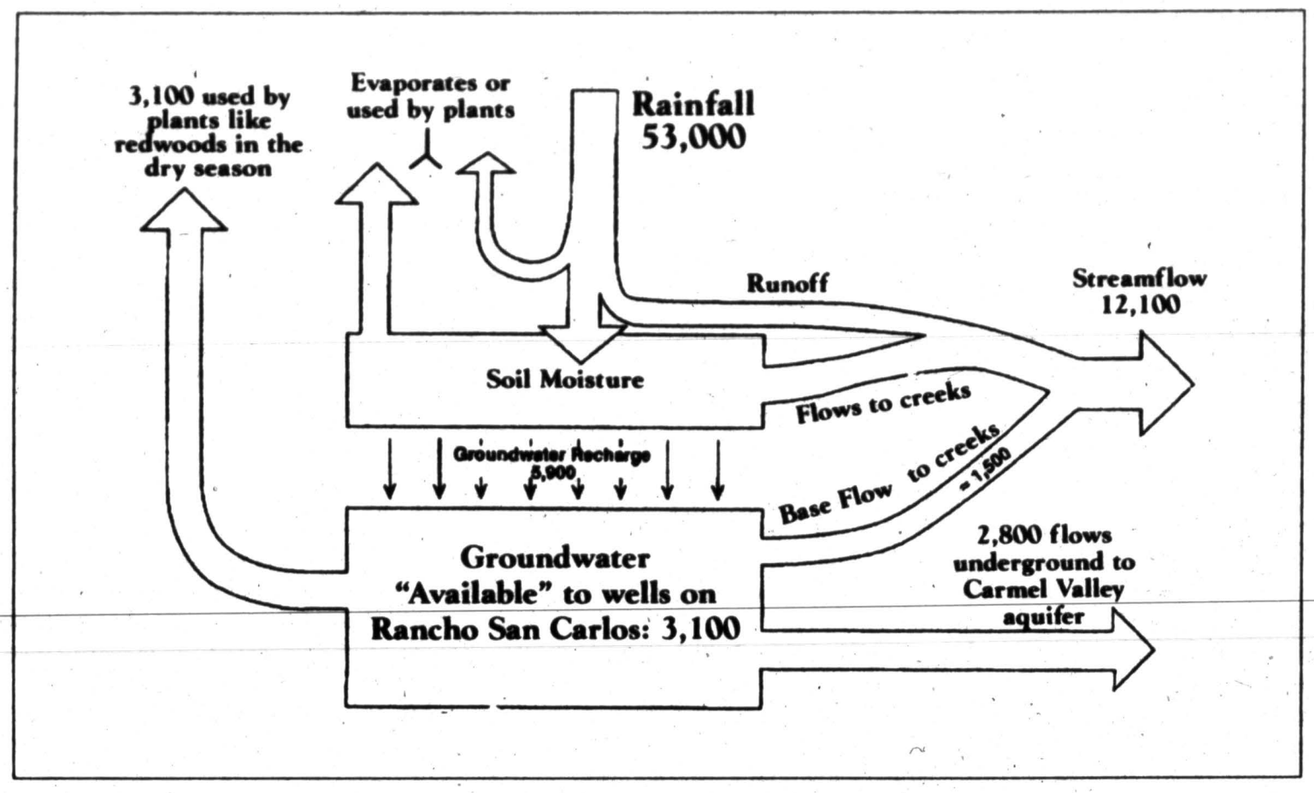
It sounds like such an elegantly simple solution to so many problems: the overdraft of the Carmel River and the destruction of rare fish and frogs there; the endless debate about whether to build the Carmel River Dam; the continuing controversy about new houses and a golf course planned for Rancho San Carlos; and the threat of water rationing for the entire Peninsula.

SPECIAL REPORT: The untappable reservoir

Could it be that the experts, who have studied the Rancho San Carlos project and its connection to the Peninsula's water supply from every conceivable environmental discipline, have overlooked a wonderfully simple solution? The two men who wrote the proposal are prepared to be called a couple of dopes, if their idea at least gets some serious consideration by the water district.

Dumb idea?

"All we want is for someone to really study this, and tell us 'It's a dumb idea for the following reasons,'" says Rod Mills, one of the authors of the letter and former president of the Big Sur Land Trust.



3,100 used by plants like redwoods in the dry season
Evaporates or used by plants
Rainfall 53,000
Runoff
Streamflow 12,100
Soil Moisture
Flows to creeks
Groundwater Recharge 5,900
Base Flow to creeks = 1,500
2,800 flows underground to Carmel Valley aquifer
Groundwater "Available" to wells on Rancho San Carlos: 3,100

This diagram traces the huge volume of rain water (53,000 acre-feet) that falls on Rancho San Carlos annually, and shows why there isn't enough available to solve the Peninsula's 10,730 acre-foot water shortage.

He and John Dalessio (a retired attorney who moved to Carmel Valley from Los Angeles three years ago) laid out their reasons why the community should buy Rancho San Carlos and its water instead of building the dam:

- Rancho San Carlos has approximately 200,000 acre-feet of water stored under its property, according to the environmental impact report's hydrological study done in 1994.

KOLLMANN

30 days.

Carmel and Carmel Valley have consistently seen one or two cases of rabid bats a year for the last five years, according to Karen Ehnert, epidemiologist with the county health department. The county has not had a case of a rabid raccoon for some time, however.

"Rabies is here, it's in the wildlife," Ehnert said. "It's maintained in the bat and skunk population." The raccoon population in the Carmel area isn't maintaining a strain of rabies in the same way as the bat population. Raccoons would have to be bitten by skunks or bats in order to become rabid here, Ehnert said.

Bats can get into homes and infect peoples' pets, Ehnert said, stressing how important it is to vaccinate cats and dogs. Such pet vaccinations are required by law, she said.

If residents see bats floundering on the ground, it's a good sign to call animal control immediately — rabid bats often lose their ability to fly, she said.

The incidents of rabies in Monterey County area are by no means high when compared with other areas of the state. San Luis Obispo County reported 70 skunks testing positive for rabies in the last year, Ehnert said.

Raccoons are a familiar sight to Kollmann, who lives on Dolores and Second. "I've never had any problem and I've seen as many as a dozen (raccoons)," he said.

Quarantine-worthy

If animal control had the opportunity to capture the guilty raccoon, it would have been put in quarantine. However, since the offender returned to the wild, there's really no way to pick him out. "I told the police, I couldn't identify him because he was wearing a mask," Kollmann said.

While Kollmann is taking the attack good naturedly, he says that he's a little more cautious while walking out in his yard. Strangely enough, he hasn't seen any raccoons since his attack. "Maybe word got around (among the raccoons) there's a guy with a stick."

To the people of the Monterey Peninsula

This is not exactly the way I wanted to start my new job.

Not with anxiety in the workplace, uncertainty in the community and even my own family wondering what the heck's going on.

It's a good question.

It's fundamentally an issue of Knight-Ridder – my employer – needing to "get its house in order" before we can build the newspaper that Monterey County deserves.

You see, with its purchase of The Monterey County Herald, the Knight-Ridder organization would have inherited a set of working terms and conditions that were inconsistent with the way it operates newspapers of a similar size.

The law provides the purchaser in such circumstances the opportunity to make an adjustment at the outset, but only if there is a fair and open hiring process that genuinely works. In other words, the new owner can establish new terms and conditions but there's a catch. That means the new owner has to hire the work force from scratch.

Practically speaking, employees of The Monterey County Herald are not automatically hired from their former employer, the E.W. Scripps Co. As a result, we must hire anew every person we need to run the newspaper after considering all applicants. The interviewing to do just that has been going on for ten days now. It must be noted that not all 235 current Herald employees applied. Nearly all did, but for what ever their reasons about twenty decided not to. In all, over 400 applications were received.

But, that leaves unanswered questions that some of you have asked.

For instance:

Q. Isn't Knight-Ridder really just trying to bust the unions?

A. Absolutely not. If it turns out that at least 51% of the people we hire in various departments are current Herald employees, we would then be required to bargain with the applicable union. Knight-Ridder newspapers in Akron, Duluth, Long Beach, Philadelphia, St. Paul, San Jose and others all have unions. We will soon know about Monterey.

Q. But won't people think you're just trying to cut the pay of Herald employees?

A. They might. But they would not have all the facts. Every former Monterey County Herald worker that we hire into the same job will receive the same base pay he or she has been getting.

Undeniably, the transition process here is painful, but it is something we must get through in order to move forward. And we will, quickly.

Now, let me tell you why I am so excited about the future of the The Monterey County Herald.

I've worked in newspapers for 19 years, my entire career. There is nothing I like better than understanding where readers and advertisers are coming from - and giving them a product that's compelling to read.

As a working mom, I'm busy. It's tough to get everything done. I want a well-packaged paper that drills down fast to local issues, that tells me about zoning, education, crime – the big issues – but still provides some fun and serendipity. Over and over, I hear it from customers: "Give me solutions to my everyday needs, and help me make sense of the complexities of life." I want nothing less for myself.

Nor will the people of Monterey County. No place as passionate as this one should settle for less than a great newspaper. The opportunity to give you one, here in one of the uniquely enchanting places on this continent, is truly a privilege.

I cannot wait to get started. And to hear your thoughts. Please write to me at P.O. Box 2750, Monterey, CA 93942

Sincerely,
Patricia T. Keil,

SCHOOLS

Candidate focuses on need to carry out strategic plan

By TAMARA GRIPPI

JOEL PANZER says one of his top priorities as a school board member would be to make sure there's enough money in the budget to fund all the programs envisioned in the school district's five-year strategic plan.

"The plan is only as good as what it takes to get it moving," said Panzer, the last person to enter the Carmel Unified School District board race.

TAMARA GRIPPI

Joel Panzer

The filing deadline was Aug. 13.

Panzer would especially like to see the fulfillment of two goals slated for 96/97 — making after-school programs accessible to more students and starting a resource center in Cachagua.

Panzer believes the schools do a good job with the students during school hours, but he would also like to see extra curricular programs expanded, including dance, theater and sports. In the past, such programs have always been subject to cuts.

"These things are so important to the middle school and high school," Panzer said. "Students could find lifelong interests (by participating in arts and other programs)."

Third-grade joins K-2 in dramatic class size cuts

By PAUL WOLF

THE CARMEL school system once again is taking advantage of the state legislature's class-size reduction program as it cuts third-grade classes to no more than 20 pupils in each.

PINE CONE FILE

Joe Jaconette

The 1997-98 school year began Wednesday.

Carmel Unified School District Supt. Joe Jaconette told The Pine Cone this week that two new full-time teachers have been hired to cover the additional third-grade classes at Carmel River, Tularcitos and Captain Cooper Elementary Schools.

The district will receive $800 from the state for every student enrolled in third-grade, Jaconette said.

Bronze sculpture prospect leads to policy questions for committee

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

SHOULD ART bought by the city for display in Carmel public places be restricted to the works of Carmel artists, or should offerings from outside the city be considered?

And what guidelines should be used in selecting appropriate art for the city?

These are just two of the conundrums facing the Committee for Art in Public Places, which met Wednesday morning in the Bingham Room at Sunset Center.

Robert Fisher, who chairs the committee, disclosed that a group of potential donors wish to purchase a bronze sculpture for the children's library and are seeking direction from the committee.

Committee members have been charged with viewing the sculpture currently displayed in a local gallery and bringing their opinions back to the next meeting.

This was the springboard for discussion on what guidelines should be followed in recommending or rejecting works of art that will be donated to or bought by the city, and Fisher requested that CAPP members bring "pet ideas for guidelines" to the next meeting.

Until these guidelines are drawn up and agreed upon, no art will be purchased or accepted by the city.

The committee was also charged with identifying sites in Carmel that would be suitable for display of outdoor and indoor sculptures.

A transfer of funds was made last month from the Community and Cultural Commission to the Committee for Arts in Public for the purchase of art, with the donor's stipulation that the art be purchased for and displayed only at Sunset Center. The gift exceeded $14,000, and has

(by participating in arts and other programs)."

Panzer would also like to see participation grow in student clubs such as chess or photo journalism.

Some children don't have the privilege of participating in after-school programs because they have no way of getting home afterwards, he said. Panzer wants the district to consider late-afternoon buses or some other way to allow Carmel Valley kids to stay after school to participate.

Frank Pinney has chosen not to seek re-election after eight years of service.

Panzer, an environmental planner at Rancho San Carlos, has been instrumental in establishing a park at Cachagua. Panzer helped convince the Regional Park District to buy the 15 acre site and found funding to install a ball field and playground equipment.

As president and founder of the board for the Cachagua project, Panzer has also been working with the school board to move forward with plans for a youth center at Cachagua.

Other challengers for the seats up for grabs in the Nov. 4 election include Howard Given, an investment adviser, Timmi Sellers, a registered nurse and Reed Bunzel, a magazine editor.

Incumbent school board member Dan Hightower will seek re-election, while Frank Pinney has opted to step down after eight years of service.

size reduction legislation Monday.

Last year, the CUSD cut K-2 classes to no more than 20 students — a 33 percent reduction — with the help of a state program that gave $650 per student.

That state assistance nearly covered the cost of additional teachers, while the district found the funds for new portable classrooms.

According to Jaconette, elementary teachers report that the class-size reduction program is a success, with the younger students now learning at a faster rate than they did when classes contained 30 or more students.

"In reading and writing and other subjects, students are outpacing previous classes," Jaconette said.

Also new this year, the district is participating in a class-size reduction plan for ninth-grade English classes.

"This is a case of our school district taking maximum advantage of state funds to accomplish something," he said.

Herald employee will have to take a pay cut, although some of their job descriptions have changed. "For instance, a reporter for the Herald may become a graphic artist for Knight Ridder," she said.

No more job security

Keirnan's soothing words didn't do much to unruffle the feathers of several Herald workers who talked to The Pine Cone.

"The older white males who have worked at the Herald for decades are dead meat, whether or not they are offered their jobs back now," said Steve Gann, a 25-year Carmel resident and Herald photographer. "Their life expectancy at that paper is nil, because they are all being forced to sign a contract agreeing to give up their job security. When the heat is off Knight Ridder, they can fire anyone they want, anytime, for no reason. Mark my words, it won't be long before the new bosses bring in younger, cheaper workers and fire the veterans when nobody's looking."

Keirnan admits that all new hires are required to sign a 50-page employee contract agreeing to become "at will" employees – thereby giving up their protection against being fired without cause. "By signing this employee handbook, workers are saying they also agree to Knight Ridder's holidays, sick leave, evaluation procedures, and working conditions," she said.

Union benefits gone

"We don't want to be 'at will employees,'" said union negotiator and Herald photographer Russ Cain. "We want security, grievance procedures, arbitration, just cause for termination. We want the raises in our contract to be honored. And we want Knight Ridder to hire 100 percent of the Herald employees who apply."

Cain said Knight Ridder hasn't spoken one word to the unions representing 190 Herald workers, so he doesn't know what to expect. The union will be out when Knight Ridder takes over in the next two weeks, and Cain says, "I can't see how a strike can be avoided if they won't talk to us at all. We will do everything we can do to avoid a strike. We aren't going to commit suicide, either."

Keirnan did not want to talk about the possibility of picket lines around the Herald, or calls by the union for citizens to cancel their subscriptions and businesses to pull their ads.

"All I would say about that is that we are going to publish the newspaper, regardless."

Crossing the picket line

If the majority of the Herald employees do take new jobs from Knight-Ridder, will they cross the picket lines of their long-time friends who are out of work? Steve Gann thinks many of them will. "They have no solidarity; they took all the goodies provided by the union for umpty-ump years, and when things get a little rough, they turn their backs. They think Knight-Ridder will take care of them. They're in denial."

The new company has not offered Gann a job, but even if they do, he says he will not go back if Knight-Ridder is successful in busting the union.

Will the community support striking workers by canceling ads and subscriptions? "We've had a tremendous outpouring of support so far," said Cain. "That's why Knight-Ridder backed off from the showdown and started hiring our people."

But other Herald readers do not feel particularly sorry for the fired workers. "They've been paid a lot of money to put out an abysmal paper for years," said one Carmel physician. "Maybe some new people will actually give us some intelligent reporting for a change."

A major stumbling block in the final negotiations with Scripps-Howard, which is trading the Herald and a sister paper in San Luis Obispo for a Knight-Ridder paper in

WATER

Water Resources Board to cure the illegal overdraft of the Carmel River is only 10,730 acre-feet, so Mills and Dalessio figure there should be more than enough water under Rancho San Carlos to solve our water woes without rationing, a dam or a desalination plant.

■ The volume of rain that falls on Rancho San Carlos averages 53,000 acre-feet of year, resulting in about 22,000 acre-feet per year of "available" water, according to the same EIR. (Read on, though, for this figure shrinks later.)

■ Rancho San Carlos' test wells tap into a distinctly separate water source from the Carmel River aquifer and meet all health-related drinking water standards, according to Walter Wong of the county health department.

"Let's say it costs $100 to $150 million to buy the ranch," estimates Mills. "That's still a pretty good buy when you compare it to the cost of the dam ($96 million, by Cal-Am's estimate) and its damage to the environment in Cachagua." Mills thinks the owners of the ranch might jump at the chance "to get out of a bad real estate investment."

"Rancho San Carlos would become a magnificent public park or wildlife preserve," wrote Dalessio, "And benefit the public in perpetuity."

Irony not lost

Tom Gray, general manager of Rancho San Carlos, says the idea that his water supply could take the place of the dam just won't float a boat. "Our wells are in fractured granite, relatively low-producing at about 20 gallons per minute. You'd need to drill 2,500 wells to reliably pump 10,000 acre-feet. That could cost $125-million, not including the cost of the pipes to transport the water. In the dry years, you'd need a really huge storage tank, huge . . . like, like . . . a dam!"

SPECIAL REPORT: The untappable reservoir

The irony of the idea is not lost on Gray. He spent years proving to the county that he had enough water to build 350 homes and a golf course, a measly 400 acre-feet a year. Now somebody thinks there's enough water under the ranch to solve the entire overdraft of the Carmel River?

The water IS there, said Darby Fuerst, general manager of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD), but we can't get it out. "Think of that 200,000 acre-feet of water as the bank vault at Fort Knox. The wells are the ATM machines." If you can only get $20 out of the ATM at a time, you'd spend a lifetime withdrawing the billions from the bank.

"Of the 50 wells drilled by Rancho San Carlos, 37 proved out between one gallon and 60 gallons per minute," explained Fuerst. "The production wells that Cal-Am uses in the Carmel River pump 2,000 gallons a minute!"

Henrietta Stern, MPWMD project manager, isn't surprised that the technical hydrology studies done for the Rancho San Carlos EIR confused Mills and Dalessio into thinking a water solution lay below the ranch. "It's just like the Seaside aquifer," she said. "There are hundreds of thousands of acre-feet of water down there, too – but only a few thousand are available to be reliably pumped out year after year."

Where does the water go?

A chart in the hydrology study done for the Rancho San Carlos project (see chart on page 8A) explains where the huge volume of rainfall goes each year, and why only a small amount is truly "available" for people to pump out and use:

■ Over half of the 53,000 acre-feet either evaporates or is used by plants; the amount climbs to almost two-thirds in the dry season.

■ About one-quarter flows down streams like Garzas Creek and Potrero Creek, and into the Carmel Valley aquifer, which is already part of the community water supply.

■ Only about 5,900 acre-feet goes into recharge, but almost half of that is moving underground to the Carmel Valley aquifer (or emerges as creeks) so it isn't "available" either.

■ That leaves only 3,100 acre-feet of water in fractured granite, to be pumped by very deep, very slow-producing wells — not nearly enough to solve the Peninsula's water woes, according to Fuerst.

"We have plenty of water in this community; our water problem has always been simply a storage problem," says Gray. "That's why a new dam is the only real solution to the overdraft of the Carmel river."

Does all this explanation satisfy the Friends of the Monterey Regional Park District?

"We're hoping to get a formal response to our letter from the water district," said Mills. "If it really is a dumb idea, then at least we'll feel good that it was investigated."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Osteoporosis is one of the health hazards that effects older people. The disease weakens the bones, makes them vulnerable to fractures and often leaves its victims with chronic pain and loss of mobility. The problem basically is a lag in replacing old bone with new tissue, a process that weakens with age. Women are more at risk than men. At medical checkups, ask your doctor how you can help prevent osteoporosis. Choosing a diet rich in calcium, by appropriate exercise and other measure is the first step.

roaming freely here?

So far, the city doesn't have any plans to change its long-held policy of allowing dogs to accompany their owners without leashes.

"There's always been the feeling that (not requiring leashes) is one of the things that makes Carmel what it is," said City Administrator Jere Kersnar. "The incident the other day shows there is a certain risk."

Kersnar pointed out that a leash law would bring up enforcement problems. Unfortunately, the people most likely to be a problem are also the ones most likely to disobey a leash law, he said. "This is the kind of problem that exists not because dogs are on the beach without leashes, but because people own violent dogs," said Jean Grace, chairwoman of the beach master plan task force.

Carmel Valley resident Beverly Laberdia now looks over her shoulder whenever she brings her Labrador to Carmel Beach — about three or four times a week. "If I see any dog with a square jaw, I'm out of there," she said.

Laberdia has her own idea about how to protect dogs from attacks: outlaw pit bulls on the beach. "Pit bulls are pretty much the problem because they're trained to be that way," she said.

Banning pit bulls in Carmel won't insure safety because many other breeds of dogs are capable of vicious behavior, said Maia Carroll, spokeswoman for the SPCA.

The city already has an ordinance that requires dogs to remain under voice control.

Dogs must remain within 25 feet of their owner, and return when called and remain there when other people or animals are near.

Since the owners of the pit bull in the recent attack were either unaware of the voice-control law or simply disregarded it, it's doubtful that they would have obeyed a leash law.

"I really don't think there was anything you could do to prevent it," said Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras. One moment a strange dog unexpectedly appeared and the next moment it locked its jaws on a dachshund, and wouldn't let go until the dog was dead.

The couple who accompanied the pit bull during the Aug. 9 attack struck it with a chain and poured ocean water on it, to no avail.

A passerby and the owner of a second dog that was attacked finally subdued the pit bull by hitting it with driftwood.

Pepper spray is often an effective way to subdue a vicious animal, according to Police Sgt. Dan Clark.

Carroll recommends carrying a long flashlight or stick to use to separate your dog from another animal.

If an attacking dog is chomping on a beloved pet, you may be able to jam a stick in its mouth and try to get it to release its hold, according to Jack Harpster, interim program manager for Monterey County Animal Control.

Owners also have to look at how much risk they're taking by throwing themselves in the middle of an attack.

"You've got to decide which is more important, your dog or yourself," Poitras said.

Owners of pit bull fled; unlikely to be found

By TAMARA GRIPPI

EVEN IF the owners of the killer pit bull could be found, it is unclear exactly how they would be held accountable.

The "owners" — who fled from Carmel Beach during a dog attack nearly two weeks ago — have disappeared without a trace.

The dog wore no collar when it was taken into custody by Carmel Police and animal control.

Police have general descriptions of the couple, but perhaps little hope of finding them. "The owners prob-

Enjoy full Life Care retirement living in Pacific Grove.

For retired college professor George Rommel, travel has been a life-long passion. He's circumnavigated the globe four times.

But for all the places he's been and things he's seen, nothing measures up to the quality of life he enjoys on the Monterey Peninsula.

George lived for 14 years in a house he designed in Carmel. When he began to look at his retirement living options, he didn't have to look very far.

George in the comfort of his apartment

At Canterbury Woods, he found a community of active individuals like himself who appreciate carefree, independent living in one of the most beautiful places on earth.

George enjoys the privacy of his own apartment, the companionship of friends both old and new, and the peace of mind that comes with the guarantee of comprehensive lifetime medical care.

ably feel it's not in their best interest to reveal themselves," said Carmel Police Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras.

Witnesses describe the man as an Asian male, 20 to 30 years old, dark-skinned, 5 feet 8 inches tall and 150 pounds. The woman is an Asian female with long straight black hair, 18 to 25 years old with a red and blue circular tattoo on her right shoulder. However, it's not certain that the couple who accompanied the dog are, in fact, the real owners.

Several bystanders believe that the pit bull was trained to kill. "You'd have a hard time proving that the owners trained the dog for fighting because that's against the law and they wouldn't admit to it," said Maia Carroll, spokeswoman for the SPCA.

The pit bull — now being quarantined at the SPCA — is a male, brown pit bull, medium size and approximately two years old. One man told The Pine Cone that he knows many pit bull owners in the area and he hopes that, by looking at the dog being held at the SPCA, he will be able to figure out who its owners are.

So far, the owners face a $35 municipal code violation for having a dog in public that doesn't respond to voice commands.

The owners could also face a $55 fine for knowingly taking a vicious dog out into public. That infraction would turn into a misdemeanor because the pit bull bit a man in the course of the attack. However, the vicious-dog law hinges on the owners having prior knowledge of their animal's aggressive nature — a difficult thing to prove.

If found, the owners could face civil action from the owners of the dead and wounded dogs — potentially having to pay a lot more than the city fines.

ACCIDENT: Tourist seriously injured downtown

"folding his leg over the planter box," according to Matt Gardner, an emergency medical technician with Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance.

Bob Temple, a fire captain from Kern County, vacationing in Carmel, was at the Mediterranean Market when he heard a thud and then a scream. Temple said he could tell by the "mournful type of scream" that something horrific had happened.

Temple ran across the street to help Parisi. "He was almost in a fetal position, his left leg was very contorted." A man and a woman were simply standing there, staring at the injured man.

Temple pressed his hand against the wound in the man's lower leg to stop the bleeding. "A unit (pint) of blood was on the ground at the time," Temple said.

'Crumpled in a ball'

The Carmel Fire Department arrived on the scene within one minute of the call, according to Mitch Kastros, captain at the CFD.

When the firefighters approached Parisi, he was "crumpled in a ball," Kastros said. "His body kind of took over and put itself in that position as the least painful," Kastros said.

"Imagine if a vehicle pushes you backward and when your leg comes to the concrete wall, it just snaps," said Carmel Police Sgt. Ken O'Donovan, who was also on the scene.

The Carmel Regional Fire ambulance arrived within minutes of the fire department, Kastros said. Parisi's leg sustained a severe open fracture — "open" means the bone literally broke through the skin, Gardner said.

At the time, Gardner and others worried that the man might lose his leg. "It was one of the worst fractures I've ever seen," Gardner said. At least one major blood vessel was torn, Temple said.

Firefighters and emergency technicians secured Parisi's head and spinal cord in order to prevent more injuries, and they kept talking to Parisi in order to help him remain conscious. Paramedics rushed Parisi to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula for surgery.

A freak accident

Kumar, the driver of the car, "was devastated," O'Donovan said. "He broke down at the scene." According to the police report, Kumar had been driving his car barefoot and arguing with his wife when his foot accidentally hit the accelerator.

There was no defect in the car that could be blamed for the accident — mechanically the Acura checked out OK. "It was a powerful car," O'Donovan said. "Everyone said the engine roared (when the car veered onto the sidewalk)."

Fire and police officers agreed it was just a freak accident. Police cited Kumar for a relatively minor offense — "an unsafe turn maneuver with associated factor of speed."

O'Donovan is thankful that more people weren't injured by the car. The combination of large crowds in the center of town on a late afternoon created the worst possible atmosphere for an accident, O'Donovan said.

"A lot of people in the area said, 'I was narrowly missed,'" O'Donovan said.

Traffic was shut down on Ocean Avenue between San Carlos and Junipero for an hour, according to police.

Held together by pins

During surgery late Tuesday night, Parisi's bones were put back together with surgical pins and vascular damage was repaired. After his surgery, Parisi was in serious but stable condition at CHOMP.

It will take some time for his bones to knit back together, Temple said. At this point, doctors are hopeful that his leg will be saved.

The medic at the accident scene said Parisi had a good pulse in his foot and was able to feel it as well, according to Todd Hutchings of the CFD.

"Only by the grace of God he was able to avoid more serious injuries," O'Donovan said.

EASTWOOD

prairie grassland. But Silver ruled those issues were "taken out of context" and noted that minor flaws in an EIR are not "fatal."

After considering all of the Sierra Club's objections, the judge noted that they had been considered and debated by the Board of Supervisors and not "swept under the table." Silver also noted that Cañada Woods North was much less damaging to the environment than the previously-approved Monterra Ranch project (for 139 houses).

"The comparison is simple; the conclusion dramatic," wrote Silver. "Regardless of what one may think of golf courses (even including the equestrian center and other features), in comparison to 105 residences in a subdivision, with all their accompanying "pavement," the question remains: which has the longer and more environmentally-intrusive effects?"

"As indicated numerous times in the record, considering open-space dedication and scenic easements, 90 percent of the 1,060 acres will remain undeveloped; substantial amounts of the pines, oaks, prairie grass, tiger salamanders, and other sensitive habitats or species will be protected; no more water will be used than could have been used anyway, and probably less; traffic will be less; the trail from Jacks' Peak to the Toro area will be improved and installed (rather than waiting for the county to find the funds to do so); etc."

Eastwood is proud that he cut the size of the original Monterra project to something much more friendly to the environment. "It's going to be very beautiful, but the Sierra Club doesn't care about that, that's not their point at all" He says when he next donates property to the public, it won't be through the Sierra Club. "I'm in the process now to keep other properties that I own in open space, but I'll use other environmental agencies, like the Big Sur Land Trust."

Macy's hosting special shopping day to benefit non-profits

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

On August 27 you can shop at Macy's and contribute money to your favorite local charity at the same time.

45 Monterey County non-profit groups will participate in the special "shopping day" benefit— including several based in Carmel.

"Macy's goes all-out that day with entertainment, food and informal modeling," said Susan Koza of the Monterey County Symphony. "It's a really fun day and a good way to raise several thousand dollars for the Symphony."

Tickets, which cost $10, entitle shoppers to a 15% discount on most merchandise in the store. The $10 goes directly to the non-profit group selling the ticket (plus Macy's kicks in an additional $3 for each ticket redeemed at the door).

Friends of Monterey County Symphony are selling tickets at their office at Sunset Center (phone 624-8511).

The John Lucido Memorial Athletic Foundation is also selling tickets and can be reached by calling 624-0602.

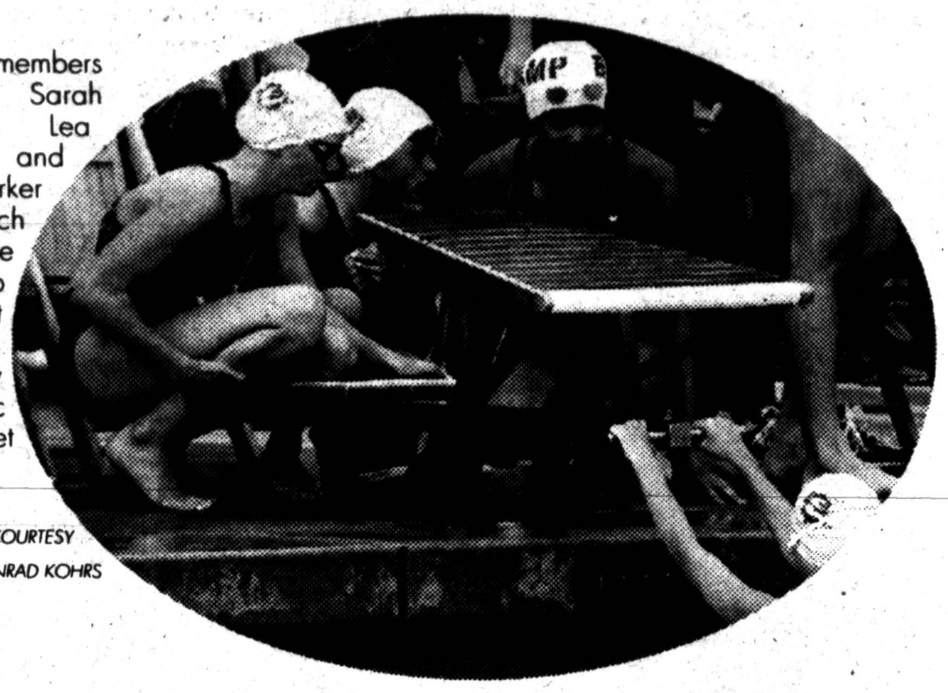
CHS swimming coach heads Peninsula-based Barracudas



Barracuda members (from left) Sarah Delcambre, Lea Houlette and Danielle Parker psyche each other up while preparing to compete at last week's Coast Valley Aquatic League meet in San Jose.

By JERRY STEWART

CARMEL HIGH School boys swimming and water polo coach Conrad Kohrs has recently broadened his duties by taking the helm of the Barracudas Aquatics of the Monterey Peninsula (BAMP).

The thirty-eight-year-old Carmel resident took over the post in July following the resignation of Mark Scott, who left for personal reasons.

"I took this position because I know about the history of the Barracudas and their commitment to success," said Kohrs. 'It's a tradition of success and we're going to build on that tradition."

'It's a tradition of success and we're going to build on that tradition.'
— Conrad Kohrs

In existence since 1952, BAMP is a non-profit summer league organization featuring boys and girls age 6 to 18 who compete against fellow swimmers from throughout the Peninsula in the Coast Valley Aquatic League.

Kohrs said that one of the great things about the organization is that it allows talented swimmers from all over the Peninsula to come together as a team.

"The team has kids from Monterey, Carmel and Pacific Grove swimming together as a team now, but later on they'll end up competing against each other when they're at different schools," said Kohrs.

According to Kohrs, one of his goals as the new coach is to look for high achievements through positive methods.

"We use a lot of log keeping in regards to swimmers' times, a lot of encouragement in the water and we try to incorporate national and international methods to improve the kids' performances," said Kohrs.

The 37-member squad recently returned from a meet last weekend which featured all eight league teams from as far as Morgan Hill. Although the Barracudas didn't win the overall title, there were some shining individual achievements.

Eighteen-year-old Kent Wehde, a former CHS swimmer and Hannah Kang, 13, of Monterey, both won the High Point Trophy in their respective age groups, accumulating the most points through five events.

Wehde, who now swims for UC San Diego, won the freestyle in 49.38, while Kang won the 100 freestyle in 56.61.

Wehde's sister, Kersten, also placed first in winning the 100 backstroke in 1:01.89.

Also, fourteen-year-old Lea Houlette of Pacific Grove placed first in the 500 freestyle (5:23.83) and Monterey's Isaac Clemens won the 17-18 year old boys 50 freestyle (22.72).

"We have some fast and dedicated swimmers," said Kohrs. "These kids are making their way towards national level meets."

Parents or kids who are interested in learning more about BAMP are encouraged to call the BAMP hotline at 620-

Local golfers shine at NCGA Amateur championship

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

PACIFIC GROVE golfers Justin Russo and Casey Boyns did all they could in last week's 92nd Northern California Golf Association Amateur Championship at Spyglass Hill, but in the end Gary Vanier of Pleasant Hill walked away with the title.

Boyns, the defending champion, made it all the way back to Friday's 36-hole matchplay final, but came up short losing 3-and-2.

What if . . .

"I played alot better than the way I had been playing," said Boyns, last year's NCGA Player of the Year. "It was just that Gary (Vanier) played better than I did. If I could have made some putts I could have won."

After eighteen holes in the morning, Vanier and Boyns were tied with each player shooting 74, but Vanier turned it on in the afternoon by shooting 2-under through 16 holes to win the championship.

Russo, a former player at San Jose State, began the tournament on a tear, including an impressive front-nine 31 during his opening match play round.

Collision course

For a day, Boyns and Russo were headed on a collision course, but on Friday Russo fell 2-and-1 during semifinal play.

Steve Carter, a Monterey Bay Golf Club member, was eliminated during the second round of Wednesday's matchplay, falling 4-and-3.

Next up for Russo and Boyns is the Sacramento Valley Championship at Sunset Whitney Country Club beginning Monday, with Boyns returning to that tournament as defending champion.

"It was just that Gary (Vanier) played better than I did. If I could have made some putts I could have won."

CV Raquet & Health Club teams fare well at district playoffs

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

AFTER FINISHING first in their respective Monterey Bay League divisions, two Carmel Valley Racquet and Health Club and United States Tennis Association teams recently returned from competing in the district playoffs held last weekend in San Jose.

Second place

The 4.5 team, captained by Michelle Rudolph, finished league play at 10-2 and came in second at the playoffs.

Meanwhile, the 4.0 team, captained by Lori Macpherson, finished fourth overall.

Carmel Valley Racquet and Health Club will host the USTA's regional playoffs this weekend.

OPINION

Editorial

Hope and fear when Knight-Ridder comes to town

"We're waiting for the definitive word on The Herald situation from The Pine Cone," the owner of a local bookstore said to one of The Pine Cone's publishers the other day.

Sure, we've got plenty of opinions about what Knight-Ridder and Scripps-Howard are doing at the Monterey County Herald.

We're very tempted to comment, especially about the irony of Scripps-Howard handing out pink slips to all Herald employees. Not long ago, you surely recall, Ackereley Communications took over Monterey TV station KCCN. Right before the takeover, the outgoing management of KCCN fired all the station's employees. Most of them later got their jobs back under Ackereley management, but that didn't prevent The Herald from printing extensive — and highly critical — news and opinion pieces about the firings.

Now Scripps-Howard and Knight-Ridder have pulled an identical maneuver, and once again the community asks, "Why?"

If the public had any idea how much blood, sweat and tears are poured into a news operation — whether in print or on television — they'd be even more curious about how the years of effort put in by KCCN and Herald employees "earned" them the right to be fired en masse by an out-of-town boss with his eyes focussed on the bottom line.

Even here at the humble, weekly Pine Cone, our management and employees put in Herculean amounts of work to bring you a quality, comprehensive view of the community every time you pick up one of our papers. The news business involves plenty of very demanding effort — it's very rewarding work, but it certainly isn't for the lazy or fainthearted. Readers are usually blissfully unaware of this fact as they pursue their morning or weekly paper over a cup of coffee.

Often equally-uninformed about the huge amounts of effort and dedication demanded of newspaper or TV station employees are the corporate owners of these vital, local institutions. Without spending months or years in a newsroom, you really can't have an appreciation for what goes on there.

But we hesitate to criticize Knight-Ridder management. Laws protecting employee "rights" have gotten so weirdly out-of-whack in the last 20 years that any maneuver designed to enhance efficiency or increase productivity is likely to run afoul of some employee's "right" to his job.

One lawyer advised us never to try to fire anybody "for cause," no matter how inadequate their job performance, because proving in a court of law that an employee "deserved" to be fired is just too difficult and costly. In other words, firing everybody is just about the only way to fire anybody. That could explain why Knight-Ridder, Scripps-Howard and Ackereley acted the way they did.

But mainly we hesitate to criticize Knight-Ridder because they will be our competition, and no business deserves to have as its chief critic its chief competitor.

Of course firing all employees is a dreadful maneuver. We never considered doing it when we bought this paper only four months ago. But assuming most of The Herald's employees get their jobs back, we welcome Knight-Ridder to this community and look forward to many years of competing with them. If they do their job well — and we do ours well, too, which we certainly intend to do — the whole community will benefit tremendously.

Music adds romance

Dear Editor:

My new husband and I were honeymooning in Carmel recently. The memories of our trip wil be with us forever and we would like to thank you for keeping beautiful Carmel as charming as it is. Please don't let it change, except for one thing, and that is the law against music in restaurants.

We read in The Pine Cone an article about that and I would like to offer my opinion that letting some of your lovely restaurants have live music wouldn't hurt anything but would actually make things more romantic. We went to downtown Monterey one night since there was nothing to do after dinner in Carmel and we would have much preferred to stay in Carmel to enjoy a glass of wine and some music — classical or jazz would have been nice — before going back to our hotel.

Just a thought for you to consider.

Pamela Thurston, San Rafael

Library foundation thanked

Dear Editor:

Tamara Grippi's recent article on the function and status of the Carmel Public Library Foundation was excellent. Since its inception in 1990, the Foundation has done an outstanding job raising funds for books, programs, equipment and services for Harrison Memorial Library.

I would like to commend the commitment and hard work of the CPLF Board of Directors, with whom I work. They bring wide experience and diverse talents to the table, work compatibly and creatively as a team, and are wise, visionary and generous.

Serving this year with Donald Langendorf, President, are Vice Presidents Cecil Wahle and Samuel L. Wright, Jr., Treasurer, Kathleen Ritter and Secretary, Virginia Stone. All are Carmel residents.

Other new and continuing board members are Clayton Anderson, Edwin R. Bayley, J. Randolph Elliott, Dr. William C. Felch, Lucette Kenan, Marilyn Murphy, Dorothy F. Newton, Marion Robotti, Thomas S. Parks, Ann Simpson, Chris

Dog killing traumatized us all, but beach policies still in our hands

Stepping forward to try to save the dog, to get truly involved, must surely have been a difficult decision.

AS WE all know, Carmel-by-the-Sea is a city of beach lovers and dog lovers. Thousands of Carmelites and visitors regularly enjoy walking that pristine shore; it is one of our oldest traditions.

Hundreds regularly share the experience with their dogs without causing problems for others; it is, after all, one of the few places left where dogs can run free and enjoy unfettered play — retrieving balls and chasing birds.

While there is no manual for good manners on our beach, there are unwritten rules of common sense in dealing with one's pets in public. There are, however, written rules (Chapter 6.08.030 of the City's Municipal Code, specifically) that address this issue.

Ken White

Mayor's reflection

Nonetheless, from time to time, both man and animal misbehave. This past week we learned of a horrible incident on our beach: the vicious attack by a pit bull that resulted in the death of a small, defenseless dog.

The attack was permitted to occur because the pit bull was not under the control of those humans who brought it to the beach, as required under the provisions of the Municipal Code.

In any situation, no matter how bad, there seems always to be some good. And to those individuals — the good Samaritans who came to the aid of the injured animal and its owner — we offer special thanks and appreciation. Stepping forward to try to save the dog, to get truly involved, must surely have been a difficult decision. These folks are special human beings and should be honored for their actions.

The death of the little dog has hit us all. On a personal level, Jean and I have raised dachshunds for a long time and feel a special sense of loss. Over the years, we have enjoyed watching these little dogs, with their large ears flapping, chasing birds and running — with difficulty, I must admit — in the deep sand, sometimes dragging their chest along because of their short legs.

There has been a real outcry throughout the community about this terrible incident. Freedom and safety in our community, including Carmel Beach, have been the highest priorities we have attempted to keep throughout the years. Some suggest it is time to reexamine our ordinances relating to dogs on the beach.

Perhaps the question is whether or not to change the ordinance and deprive the many of the privilege of enjoying the beach with their pets to curtail the misbehavior of the few.

In late 1996, your city council appointed the beach master plan task force to address matters pertaining to the beach and to make recommendations to the council. This group, whose membership consists of 24 Carmelites from all areas of the city, has met regularly throughout 1997. If the task force determines that such a change should be considered, it will make such a recommendation to the council. In that case, we will hold public hearings to ascertain the will of the majority before taking action.

We urge all Carmelites and all of our visitors to employ common sense, good manners, and to demonstrate the courtesy we ourselves would expect to receive from others. The Carmel-by-the-Sea white sand beach is a treasure; it belongs to all of us, it should be a haven.

Motoring Weekend a study in excess, but who could ask for better time?

By BILLY HINDS

THE MINISTER of Excess, some say, was given far too large a budget this year!

Everywhere you went were antique, vintage and exotic cars decorating our streets and highways with their individual colors, shapes and sounds, and to those of us who love cars, too much is usually just the right amount.

If any event during this week of excess suffers more than others with traumas of growth, it is most certainly Pebble. Where do you put close to 7,000 cars in the forest? Yes, there were complaints; it's not the way it used to be, but somehow it all worked; they got everybody there.

Those of us who parked in reserved areas at the Center were shuttled to the Lodge by open trolley trailers, pulled by specially-equipped pickups. This is the first time these shuttles were used; they were driven all the way from Texas for this one-day event.

At the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance, trying to outguess judges a favorite pasttime. Sometimes we get it; sometimes we don't. Those who guessed it would be Ralph Lauren's black T-57S Bugatti had to re-evaluate their logic. Class J-I went to William E. Connor, II, who'd brought his Talbot-LagoType 150C all the way from Kowloon, Hong Kong, and was chosen from the 25 other class winners to receive Pebble's highest prize.

As for the Pacific Grove Concours Auto Rally, about 125 cars showed up for the 18-mile tour of the Peninsula.

Dodge Vipers galore could be seen in downtown Pacific Grove last week, fascinating passersby.

Allen Cohen, one of the chief coordinators, told us that 130 people attended the barbecue, and they suspect the proceeds will exceed last year's, which went to assist the Pacific Grove Youth Action.

Meanwhile, Alfa Romeo at the Barnyard was just what we needed to bring this marque together in this community.

We thank the Waldroups for a marvelous party. Planned and staged in just three short weeks, Mark Waldroup showed courage in allowing this event to manifest itself spontaneously. Lynne Kemmer, Marketing & Events Coordinator, dodged every bullet and acted with such enthusiasm and expertise you'd have thought she was a die-hard car freak.

Our goal was to befriend the Alfa Romeo Association members who occupy the Mission Inn and at the same time let local Alfa owners know that we all drive under the same banner. Wine was donated by Deer Valley Vineyard and pizza supplied Allegro. Geno's generosity, and the quality of his pizza, prompted us to choose Allegro as the regular meeting spot for Alfas in Eden.

The Thunderbird Bookstore still has copies of two special books brought in for this occasion. "Phil Hill: Yankee Champion," by William F. Nolan, is a book first published in 1962, the year following Hill's becoming the first American to win the World Driver Championship. It has been enhanced with a chapter that illustrates that this old warrior has not faded away but instead has used his knowledge and experience to enrich the entire idiom of automobiles.

"Moving Beauty" was an exhibit staged in '95 at the Montreal Museum of Fine Art in which 50 cars from private collections and museums in coincidence with the XXth World Road Conference. For those looking for a reference manual that captures the entire evolution of automotive industrial art, and for those needing a sure-fire hit as a gift to a car person, "Moving Beauty" is a prize and a bargain at $50.

Looking at the impacts of the whole weekend, we must remember that this is a residential community, and it was never designed to handle the ever-increasing volume of traffic. Nothing will deter the attendance of the faithful. This is Mecca; the suffering of the pilgrims cannot equal that of those who've labored and sacrificed to bring together these rites.

Colorado, is severance pay for the 235 people who are getting fired in the next two weeks. The union is determined to get every penny called-for in their contract, which can add up to a pretty penny, indeed. "Our contract language is clear," said Cain. "We are entitled to a week's pay for every year with the Herald, up to 44 weeks." Gann adds, "Some people have over $30-grand coming to them."

But Scripps-Howard has reportedly called the severance pay a "windfall," especially for people who will go to work the next day for Knight-Ridder. "We have a dispute about severance, and it would be inappropriate for me to comment, said Tom Hooten, director of human resources for Scripps-Howard, who has taken the same position with Knight-Ridder.

Hooten, like every other Herald employee who has been offered a new job with Knight-Ridder, will have to take and pass a drug test before they actually get the job. So far, 78 have passed the drug screening, and no one has flunked, according to the company.

We are pleased to be involved in the expansion of our Regional Heart Center.

Join us in March, 1998, for the launching of our expanded regional heart center. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) has agreed to kick-off this technologically advanced facility by hosting a 16-day exhibit. NASA has developed technology which has medical applications, such as a pacemaker that can be programmed from outside the body. Look for more details about this exciting community event as our expansion project nears completion.

The heart center expansion will provide:

- 3 new heart catheterization labs
- An additional open heart surgery suite
- Expanded nutritional services facilities
- Increased space for health/wellness education programs
- Technologically advanced medical equipment
- Expanded medical library
- Teleconference center

Our central coast regional heart center, located at SVMH compares favorably with major university medical centers in the country. For example, in the last year Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital completed 418 open-heart surgeries. The University of California at Los Angeles Medical Center (UCLA) completed 484 open-heart surgeries in the same period of time.

It's comforting to know, our regional heart center continues to be one of the front-runners in cardiac care services — located right here on the central coast.

No quick sale for Flanders Mansion

By KIRSTIE WILDE

A PROMINENT Palo Alto attorney is ready to buy Flanders Mansion, and thereby fatten the city's coffers by at least a million dollars. But selling the historic landmark will not be quick or easy, even if (and it's a great big 'IF') the city gets an overwhelming citizen mandate to dispose of the property.

"First we have to figure out if it is park land," explains City Manager Jere Kersnar, "Because if it is, we have to follow a separate property disposition process according to state law."

Next, the city would have to subdivide the property, to separate the mansion from the rest of the parcel which also contains part of Mission Trails Park and the Lester Roundtree Native Plant Garden.

Finally, the city would have to figure out how to offer the property for sale. "Do we auction it? List it with a real estate company? Advertise it in the newspaper?" asks Kersnar.

A prominent Palo Alto attorney is the leading contender to move into Flanders Mansion. But the city — even though it has turned down two proposed commercial uses for the property — may not be able to sell it for residential use anytime soon.

Patient buyer

John Paul Hanna, the attorney who wants to buy and renovate Flanders, has had his eye on it for years.

"I first tried to buy it when Clint was mayor," he told The Pine Cone. "The city never acted on that offer. This is about the fourth time in the past ten years that I have indi-

Real Estate Bull Market Rages On

House Talk

By Paul & Nellie Brocchini

WE ARE not sure there has ever been a real estate market quite like this one in Carmel. Sales volume for the second quarter, 83 transactions, shattered the previous quarterly reading of 69 sales by 20%. The median sales price for the quarter jumped up to $535,000, well above the $469,000 of the first quarter and the $440,500 for all of last year.

There have been 28 sales during the first 48 days of the third quarter with an overall median price of $525,000, a little off of the $535,000 of the second quarter but still a strong number.

The Market Barometer on August 17 was an exceedingly strong 33.74%, the highest number we have ever recorded. Fifty five of the 163 listed properties on that date were in escrow. We are happy when a market hits 20% on the Market Barometer. A figure above 30% is truly extraordinary for Carmel.

The Neighborhoods

Carmel, as defined by the multiple listing service (MLS) includes a broad area from Jack's Peak to Carmel Meadows. To really get a feeling for what is going on, one has to look at statistics for the various neighborhoods that make up Carmel.

Neighborhoods in the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea have had the bulk of the action in the current hot market.

The fabulous "Golden Rectangle" (bounded by Dolores, Scenic, Ocean Avenue and Santa Lucia) continues to be the market star with 25 sales this year and an impressive median sales price of $742,500.

The Northwestern part of Carmel-by-the-Sea has had more sales so far this year — 27 — but the median sales price at $550,000 is almost $200,000 below the glittering prices of the Golden Rectangle.

Other very strong neighborhoods have been the Southeast part of town with 22 sales, Carmel Point with 21 and the Northeast with 19. Carmel Woods, Hatton Fields and Carmel Meadows, all outside the city limits of Carmel-by-the-Sea, realized healthy sales.

Carmel Neighborhood Activity 1/1/97 to 8/17/97

Neighborhood	No. Sales Yr. to Date	No Sales Since 7/1	Median Sales Price Yr. to Date
Northwest	27	5	$550,000
Golden Rectangle	25	4	$742,500
Southeast	22	2	$478,500
Carmel Point	21	5	$575,000

Price Distribution

As we have noted in previous columns, Carmel has the broadest market on the Monterey Peninsula in terms of price distribution. The town has had ample inventory in every price category above $200,000 which is reflected in the distribution of sales price so far this year. There has been only one sale this year under $200,000. Congratulations to our friend and office colleague, Roger Parkes, for both listing and selling this property. Roger has proven that occasionally, at least, there is something more-or-less affordable in Carmel.

The most popular range is from $300,000 to $399,999 which has registered 40 sales thus far this year. All of the higher categories are well represented, too, including the $1 million dollar plus range which has chalked up 15 sales so far this year.

How long this bull can continue to roar is anybody's guess. But what we know for sure half-way through the third quarter is that the current quarter will be another smash hit in a season of smashes for Carmel real estate.

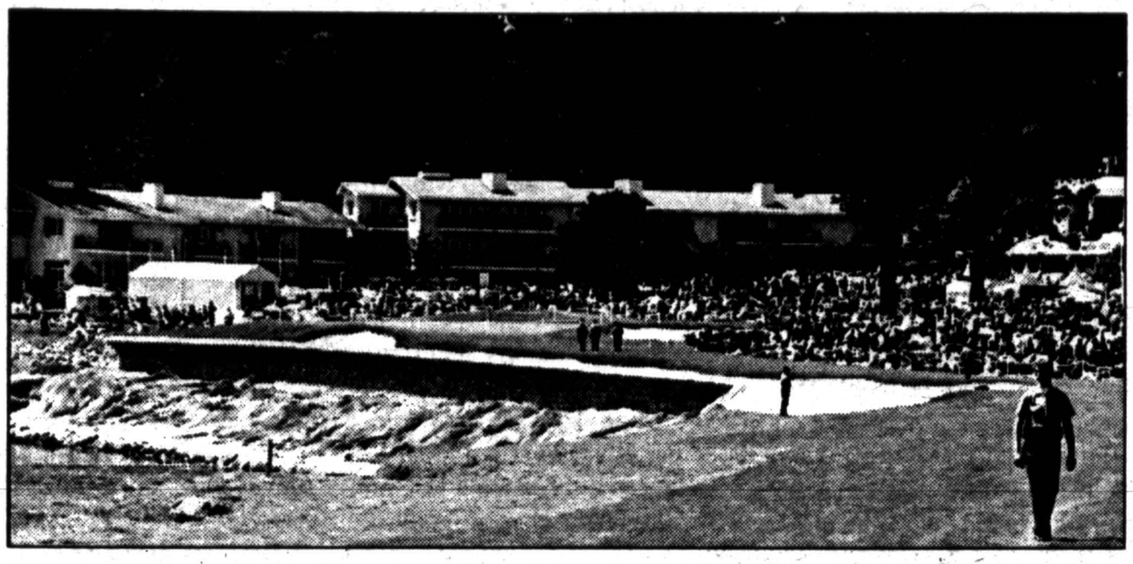
18th fairway at Pebble Beach protected from winter's fury



Visitor's to last Sunday's Concours d'Elegance got their first look at the $3 million seawall recently installed by the Pebble beach Company along the world-famous 18th hole of the Pebble Beach Golf Links. The new wall is designed to halt erosion of the fairway's edge — which had become a serious problem in recent years.

cated, if they really wanted to sell it, that I was a buyer." Hanna would also consider a 99-year lease, if that's how the city wants to structure the deal.

Hanna says he's prepared to spend two million dollars to return Flanders mansion to its former glory. (That is in addition to the purchase price.) "We would do it right," he promises. "We would be faithful to the style of architecture, the period, the craftsmanship in any additions." He has already discussed the project with local architect John Matthams, because "he'd be the perfect guy to do it, being from England and trained in England."

Hanna owns two other properties in Carmel (which he would sell in order to purchase Flanders): a home on Dolores and an empty lot at the north end of Carmel beach.

He also would like to use the Mills Act to get a break on his taxes. The act, says Hanna, "allows tax benefits for an owner of an historic building who remodels it with historic preservation standards, and who gives the community some public use of it." For example, Hanna says he would certainly open the house for occasional tours if that would provide a public benefit and tax savings.

"Right now," he says, "Carmel has a valuable asset there, and they aren't getting any return on it at all. They'd have to spend $750,000 on seismic retrofit and compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act before they could put it to any public use."

"If they sold Flanders, they could get a million dollars plus, just like that, to kick off the fund to renovate Sunset Center," says Hanna.

Gnat's eyelash

Hanna has been down the long and twisted road to Permit Land in Carmel, once to get a hazardous tree removed, once to drill a well, and more than once to get design review approval for a new home on his beach lot. His experience in land-use law has convinced him to place the following condition on his offer to buy Flanders:

"I would want every last approval given before close of escrow, down to the last gnat's eyelash." That would include boundary lines, approval of a caretaker's cottage above a new garage, and enough land for a "Wimbledon-type grass tennis court."

Jere Kersnar understands why a buyer wouldn't want to buy a pig in a poke, and says a contingent sales contract is a possibility. "But we have to be careful, because we can't make a promise that precludes us from having a free hand to regulate," Kersnar said.

Besides Hanna's offer, the city has received inquiries from the Monterey Institute of International Studies, the Waldorf School, and a local real estate agent who says he has several clients interested in buying or leasing Flanders.

Innkeepers say ballot measure may force them to pay more than their fair share of ambulance tax

By PAUL WOLF

ALTHOUGH UNLIKELY to fight the formula that spells out how much each property would pay, some Carmel innkeepers say Measure B asks too much of them.

The tax, which the Carmel electorate will vote on come November 4, would assess every four motel/hotel rooms as one single-family home. In other words, every four units would be assessed at up to $75 a year. (The precise amount would be determined year by year.)

"I think $1,500 is a lot of money," said Tom Glidden, general manager of La Playa Hotel, which has 80 rooms and is the largest inn in Carmel. "I am a little shocked at this formula."

John Wilson, general manager of the 49-room Pine Inn, agreed. "Every four rooms (as one single-family home) seems excessive."

Gary Luce of Inns By The Sea, which has six Carmel motels, says he is "not going to make a big deal about it," but he notes that inns already contribute the largest single source of revenue for the city and shouldn't be asked to pay so much to support the Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance.

Luce, Glidden and Wilson believe that the track record of ambulance use at lodgings in town would make a better basis for a formula than the number of rooms each one has. Glidden and Wilson recall very few "911" incidents at their hotels over the past several years, and neither believes that a hotel or motel normally generates more incidents than, say, a busy restaurant or retail business.

To the dollar

While the details of how the Measure B revenue would be spent are still unresolved, the size of each new tax bill is known pretty much to the dollar.

The figure usually cited for the proposed ambulance parcel tax, scheduled for the ballot in November, is no more than $75 a year for houses in Carmel.

Naturally, that category includes the vast majority of Carmel-by-the-Sea property owners. The county assessor's office identifies 2,582 single-family parcels in Carmel.

The formula the Carmel City Council has agreed to use would have standard retail and service businesses paying up to $150 a year; restaurants, churches, medical offices, banks and schools paying $300; convalescent facilities paying $375; and motels paying up to $18.75 per room, with La Playa paying the most of them all.

All the money raised would be used to cover the city's subsidy of the CRFA, the alternative service to the slower-responding county-wide network. (See related story in section A of this week's Pine Cone.)

Inns By The Sea's biggest motel, the Svendsgaard Inn, has 34 units, and thus would pay $637.50 a year.

"I don't have a problem with the amount, but we aren't skating through this," Luce said.

He said if there is to be a battle on how much inns should pay, it would be largely a fight for principles, not a significant financial impact. "We are taking about pennies here," he said.

The ordinance that the council adopted Aug. 5 identifies 48 different kinds of properties, as listed on the assessor's inventory.

"I guess you could say we chose $75 because it wasn't $100," said Carmel City Administrator Jere Kersnar, suggesting that a cheaper tax is by definition more palatable than an expensive one.

Under the target

Noel Van Bibber, a member of a citizens committee that helped fashion the parcel tax proposal, said the actual amount that each household pays could fall well below the maximum.

If city officials decide to cover out-of-pocket ambulance expenses, the amount of tax revenue needed would be higher than if it doesn't.

Furthermore, should city officials determine that the CRFA needs more staff, better equipment and so on, the city again would have to ask more of each property owner.

"There are a lot of questions that need to be answered, but I think it is going to be fair," said Pat Sippel, who now chairs the Yes on Measure B Committee.

According to Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth, the city and county are going to have to put their heads together to determine whether the assessor's parcel descriptions accurately reflect current uses.

Does every single-family home that has a self-sufficient granny units in the backyard appear as two units in the assessors office? A main house and an auxiliary dwelling should be assessed at $150.

Are some new restaurants listed as simple "commercial shells?" Restaurants are assessed at a higher level than standard businesses.

According to the formula, vacant lots would assessed at half that of developed single-family houses — $37.50.

"Yes, it is true that there would not be an immediate need for (ambulance service) on a vacant lot, but you can argue that the lot is more attractive and valuable in this city because this city has that service," Kersnar said.

Carmel Mayor Ken White addressed the same topic, saying, "Owners of vacant lots are already paying for everything else — sewer lines, property taxes. It's the way it is. But on the other side, if they are staying in a rental next door to their property, and they need an ambulance, it will come."

"Buck" Bemis Wins a Night at Post Ranch Inn!

The Carmel Pine Cone sponsored an open house held in Carmel last week by Rhonda Williams of Coldwell Banker/Del Monte Realty.

In a drawing held at the open house, Buck Bemis of Ben Heinrich Realty was the lucky winner of a one night stay for two at the beautiful Post Ranch Inn in Big Sur.

Realtors should watch for future drawings with equally desirable gifts that will be held by The Pine Cone in the months to come.

Shocked by paid parking idea

Dear Editor:

I was shocked to read that our City Council, in a desperate effort to raise money to pay for the demolition of a portion of Sunset Center and its replacement by a larger, more grand new facility, is proposing a paid parking plan for our business district.

The end of free, convenient parking in our downtown is an awful idea. Free parking is one thing that makes village life so nice. I can park and buy a newspaper, pick up some groceries and do all my errands easily and quickly. Paid parking would end all of this. I simply do not understand who comes up with these nutty ideas.

More importantly, I regret our city government wants to ruin our business district and the surrounding R-1 district so then can pay for a $13-20 million performing arts and garage project that will benefit mainly nonresidents! To me, this is appalling. I want my tax dollars to help this village and its residents. More and more often, bad decisions in City Hall are being made to help a small group build a new Sunset Center. This is just plain old lousy politics. It is very disappointing.

Sunset Center is just fine the way it is. I do not want it to become a "world-class hall" which runs an even larger deficit than it does now. Above all, we should not destroy the village to build something we do not need.

Pine Cone 'lively'

Dear Editors:

Thanks for your excellent paper's recent notice of my work for the Carmel Bach Festival and your generous coverage of the entire Bach Festival.

Margot Nichols and Nathalie Plotkin, as well as your photographers, have given the Festival firm support which is vitally necessary for the Festival, depending as it does on extensive local support. The many volunteers from all over the Peninsula make the annual miracle of great music a continuing possibility.

My husband, William Burkett, and I are very thankful for the excellent paper you produce. Both of us have been eager readers of The Pine Cone for many years.

I wrote for The Pine Cone as Nancy Lofton in the forties and fifties — feature articles, "Scouting the Shops," and reviewing music and art happenings until my teaching career prevented any further writing. I spent many hours in the old shop with Wilma and Cliff Cook — and always

Ventana Inn was developed by Lawrence Spector and opened its doors in the 1970's. It was sold to Transamerica Corporation in 1980, and by 1990 Transmerica had expanded the Inn to its present size — 60 guest rooms, two swimming pools, two Japanese hot baths, and a restaurant.

Ventana Inn is a favorite among people "from around the world who are in need of recharging their batteries," according to General Manager Randy Smith, who has worked at Ventana for 20 years.

Guests have included numerous celebrities, like Robert Redford, Mel Gibson, and (earlier this summer) Ellen Degeneres.

Locals love the place, too — especially their midwinter 50%-off room rate for Peninsula residents.

"Transmerica has been a great owner," Smith continued. "Working with them and Kent Colwell (President of Ventana Inn, Inc.) has been the most rewarding business relationship of my life. They've been great to the guests and the employees."

Smith said he is very optimistic that the traditions of Ventana Inn will continue under the new owners, whoever they might be.

Ventana Inn has been a very successful business, sources told The Pine Cone, with a year-round occupancy rate of 85% and room rates from $250 to over $500 per night.

So why is Transamerica selling?

"Real estate and hotel ownership are not part of our core business," Bill McClave of Transamerica told The Pine Cone.

Transamerica, famous for its pyramid-shaped skyscraper that dominates the San Francisco skyline, is a life insurance and financial service company with assets of "more than $50 billion," McClave said.

appreciated the support of the paper for the Bach Festival and the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club. Thank you for the lively paper.

Nancy Morrow Burkett, Carmel

Someone who likes roundabouts

Dear Editor:

I was impressed by the "roundabout" intersections of France and believe that this system is a viable and economical solution for Carmel's highway problems, and could provide a solution that precludes building a by-pass that is unwanted and perhaps unnecessary.

Roundabouts at Carpenter, Ocean, Carmel Valley Road, and Rio Road would seemingly work far more efficiently than the stop lights presently in place, and would certainly add more charm to Carmel than more freeway. It would be interesting to know if this has been considered as one of the options.

Chad Lincoln, Carmel Valley

Lo-flo that you only flush once

Dear Editor:

Your consumer report on the above subject was enjoyed by us. We had gone through a toilet evaluation in December, 1996, and January, 1997.

Our conclusion was that we purchased a Mansfield Hi-Rise (for seniors) for $160.00 and a regular height for $74.00. We had one installed on December 24, 1996, and the other one on January 6, 1997. We had a local plumber install these at less than $60 apiece.

These are 1.6 gallon toilets that only need one flushing — not three times. After seeing our units friends of ours have installed the same units and are very satisfied with them.

The cheapest unit in your article was the Gerber at $ 115 which would be comparable to our $74 one. We believe a lot more people would install low-flo if they knew about the Mansfield units.

PROFESSIONAL FULL SERVICE MANAGEMENT FOR YOUR PROPERTY

Property Management means more than collecting a fee for handing out keys and collecting rents. It is the careful matching of individual needs and taste to a home that will fulfill those needs.It is conveying the feeling of WELCOME HOME for each renter, and the feeling of security by homeowners that their property is receiving the best possible care and attention to detail.

Carmel Vignette

Dali's Nightmare Fantasy

CARMEL'S RENOWNED eccentric aura has, on occasion, wandered with gusto over to neighboring areas, too.

One memorable event was a party thrown in 1941 at the Del Monte Lodge (now better known as the Pebble Beach Lodge) by a truly unique character — Salvador Dali, the surrealist artist who also spent some time in our corner of the world.

Purportedly organized to benefit refugee artists from war-torn Europe, this "Night in a Surrealist Forest" demanded guests to come dressed as their worst nightmare.

The initial shopping list for the party included 4,000 gunny sacks to be hung from the ceiling, 24 animal heads to be attached to 24 store-window mannequins, a wrecked car (yes, you read correctly), an assortment of zoo animals, and the largest bed one could find in Hollywood.

On the evening of the celebrity-studded event, Salvador Dali and his wife, Gala, positioned themselves on a huge red velvet bed and kept company with a tiger cub and porcupine borrowed, along with many other wild animals, from a zoo in San Francisco.

But the pièce de résistance was undoubtedly the scenario that utilized the wrecked car. In the overturned vehicle was a nude model, purposely sedated to add more realism to her lifeless appearance. (She may have considered it a new twist on the casting couch approach!) Two dancers also emerged at one point, totally bandaged, to perform a "dance of death."

It was truly a blast for the guests that night . . . .

Court calls ordinance banning adult-oriented businesses within city limits 'unconstitutional'

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

A U.S. DISTRICT Court has ruled that a ordinance banning all "adult" businesses from the Southern California city of Rialto is an unconstitutional violation of the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

At issue was a city ordinance which ostensibly permitted adult-oriented businesses to operate in Rialto's "general commercial" and "commercial manufacturing" zones, but which also banned any such business at a location "within 1,000 feet of a residential zone."

A company identified in court documents as "C.R. of Rialto, Inc." sued the city, asking to be allowed to resume providing "erotic performances" at its former place of business in the city of Rialto.

Rialto, Inc., submitted to the court an analysis of the city's ordinances and its Land Use Zoning Map. The analysis concluded that there is "no land within the city zoned for commercial uses that is not within 1,000 feet of a residential zone [and that therefore] there in fact no location within the city where an adult business may locate."

In deciding the case in favor of the erotic business operator, U.S. District Court Judge Robert Timlin observed that regulations limiting adult-oriented businesses "are acceptable so long as they are designed to serve a substantial government interest and do not unreasonably limit alternative avenues of communication" — in other words, limiting adult-oriented businesses to certain locations within a city is okay, but banning them altogether is not.

The sole issue in this case, the judge said, was whether the city's ordinances limiting the location of adult-oriented businesses within the city left Rialto, Inc., any reasonable way to operate somewhere within the city.

"The law is well established," the judge wrote, "that a city may not enact a total ban of adult-oriented businesses, or make it practically impossible for them to locate within the city, because such regulations violate the business operator's right to free expression of speech under the First Amendment."

A COLUMN IN PUBLIC SERVICE: What NOT to tell the boss

WITH various strikes in process, threatened, or just completed here (UPS, Granite Rock, the Herald, Pebble Beach employees), it seems timely this column should offer some priceless tips on avoiding gaffes in dealing with your boss.

This is assuming, of course, that you DO go back to work.

WHAT we offer here is a map to help you steer clear of verbal land mines that may be taken as affronts or insults by your boss, which could cost you

IN MEMORIAM
TOBY BRUNET (1991 - 1997)

Toby Brunet was a long-haired dachshund who was born in Munich, Germany, and whose life was taken Aug. 9 by a pit bull on Carmel Beach.

Toby's death was particularly tragic, but what we would like to do here — in the space dedicated to recording the joyous aspects of Carmel Beach dogs — is to recall happier times in Toby's life.

Toby was adopted as a puppy in Heidelberg and brought to the United States by his American military family.

He loved his family, and was "just always there for us, wanting to be noticed," his dad, Ron Brunet said. "Toby greeted me every morning. He licked faces of the people he loved the most. I will always have this picture in my memory of my 10-month-old granddaughter, Charlotte, putting her little face in Toby's face, and the two of them just looking at each other."

Toby's constant companion, until six months ago, was another dachshund, Gabby, who was born in Berlin two years before Toby came along. When Gabby died earlier this year, Toby lost a dear friend. His family took him to the beach more frequently to ease his loss.

Toby's favorite thing on earth was to run on the beach. "He loved that freedom," Ron said.

What will Toby be remembered best for?

"His loving demeanor," Ron replied. "Toby never got in a fight with anybody. He loved people."

Father and sons' round-the-world painting trip culminates in a collective show in Carmel

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

YOU'VE HEARD of people working their way around the world ... tramp steamering ocean to ocean ... I even met two doctors on a flight to Karachi who were jogging their way around the world.

But Carmel artist George Bleich and his sons, Jonathan, 7, and Chris, 20, have just returned from a trip during which they painted their way around the world.

An exhibition of their combined paintings opens at 1 p.m. tomorrow at Bleich Gallery, four doors south of Ocean on Dolores Street, to which "friends and the public are invited," according to Bleich.

TEMPLE PAINTING IN BALI this summer, Christopher, Jonathan and George Bleich are shown here in Bedugul, only one stop on their round-the-world painting trip. Paintings by all three may be viewed tomorrow at a 1 p.m. reception at the Bleich Gallery on Dolores Street.

George, Christopher and Jonathan will be present to share their paintings and their experiences of what Bleich terms their "summer of discovery."

"For years I've traveled the world," Bleich said. "But until now I never quite made it around the globe. To share this experience with my two artist sons was a great joy."

The Bleichs painted in Australia, Bali, Bangkok, Egypt, Jordan, Greece, Corfu, Paris, Giverny and New England, and picked up musical instruments along the way. They composed songs on the trip, using a guitar they had purchased in Kuta, Bali, and developed skill on a four-foot didjeridoo they carried from Australia.

"We rode camels across the Sahara in Egypt," Bleich said, "and horses in Jordan. We snorkeled in the Red Sea and in the crystal clear waters around Greece, and Chris surfed in Australia and Bali."

But most of all, they painted. In Egypt they drew a crowd of curious children and villagers who watched on the banks of the Nile as all three worked on one canvas.

Ranchers' Days arrive this weekend

Carmel Valley steeped in ranch country lore

UNHARNESS YOUR hunger, rustle up some friends, round up the family and roll on out to the Trail and Saddle Club today through Sunday for Carmel Valley Ranchers' Days. This invitation is especially directed toward all you visiting city folk who may not have yet ventured into the Valley. Home to fabulous golf, shopping and restaurants, Carmel Valley is still "ranch country" to many who live and work in the area.

By JENNIFER VIEGAS

There are loads of great stories about local ranches, past and present. One concerns Maria del Carmen, who owned Rancho Pescadero and Rancho Cañada Honda. Portions of Hitchcock's "Rebecca" and the Ingrid Bergman film "Intermezzo" were both shot on these properties at Pescadero Point. Although Maria del Carmen's ranchos exceeded well over 4,000 acres, she sold them for $500 and moved into a 90-foot Monterey adobe home. As del Carmen had a romantic nature, it was later explained that she at least could now peek through her shutters and experience "the romance and social whirl of Monterey."

George Gordon Moore, an attorney and sportsman, held an opposing view on ranchos. He relished life on his 22,000 acre Rancho San Carlos, and allocated more than $1 million toward improvements on it in the 1920s. The rancho featured an airport, golf course, a 57-room hacienda, swimming pool and even a wild Russian boar game refuge. Unfortunately his financial luck ran out after the stock market crash. He wound up selling everything.

Yet another tale concerns Berwick Ranch. Legend has it that author Robert Louis Stevenson visited Edward Berwick late one night, after completing a long, tiresome hike. Berwick had to house Stevenson and a friend in his hayloft. The following night, Stevenson again returned late. A polite hostess, Mrs. Berwick jumped out of bed, ran to the kitchen and asked, "What can I fix for you — a cup of hot coffee or a whiskey toddy?" Stevenson requested both.

Such legendary history is sure to be in the making at this year's Carmel Valley Ranchers' Days. Jerry Hecker, a board member and event director, explains, "This will be our 15th year. It is a fund-raiser. Last year we donated $10,000, after expenses, back to the community. This year the money will go to 4H clubs, the community center, local fire departments and schools."

In addition to serious rodeo-style competitions, like team penning, calf branding, roping and stock horse shows, there will be a Carmel Valley Ranchers' Day's Queen contest. Judging is based upon horsemanship, dress and public speaking. The winner will go on to compete at the California Rodeo in Salinas. Admission price for all of the above is free. (How often do you hear that?) You only have to fork over greenbacks for some mighty fine ranch chow.

Tonight organizers will prepare a barbecue dinner with

THEATER REVIEW

The Bard's classics revived as real knee-slappers

Bard attack: Stars of the Pac Rep Shakespeare show, clockwise from top: Randal Wung, Paul Jennings and Chris Graham.

By PATRICK WHITEHURST

APPLAUSE ... applause! The audience pleaded for one more curtain call so we could have the opportunity to thank Randal Leigh Wung, Paul Jennings and Chris Graham, who were actually the entire cast of "The Complete Works of Wllm Shakspr (Abridged)." It was without doubt one of the funniest, most refreshing evenings we have ever shared at the Circle Theater.

And no wonder these gentlemen did not take a final bow; they were doubtless piled in breathless heaps somewhere backstage, trying to regain enough strength to change into street clothes and toddle home. Their energy was awe-inspiring (or for the young-at-heart, "awesome").

WHAT: 'The Complete Works of Wllm Shkspr, (Abridged)'
WHEN: 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday
WHERE: Circle Theatre of the Golden Bough, Casanova between 8th and 9th, Carmel
COST: $15 adults/$10 students, seniors, military and teachers
INFO/RESERVATIONS: 622-0100

Witty. Zany. Madcap humor. The show was all those things, but this wasn't just vaudeville ... it was superb acting, and it takes superb acting to pull off the sidesplitting burlesque of Shakespearean rendition by Adam Long, Daniel Singer and Jess Winfield of the Shakespeare we all tried to understand and learned to dread and hate as high school and college students.

Had I seen this interpretation during my course in literature at Columbia University about 100 years ago I may have been able to come up with something a little better than a C-.

This co-production by the Western Stage and Pacific Repertory Theatre, directed so ably by Richard Kuhlman, would have made Bard devotees of us all ... and probably "A" students.

"Now I understand!"

With Johnny Carson, Elvis Presley and Darth Vader taking lead Shakespearean roles, the plots become childishly simple to comprehend, especially with rap lyrics and rhythm, football scrimmage lines and bone-jarring pratfalls. By the way: "Hamlet" makes far more sense played word-for-word backward than it ever did forward.

The use of audience members as coached and directed extras was so enthusiastically accepted that you would swear they had all attended rehearsals. And the recruitment of one unsuspecting front row audience member dragged reluctantly from his seat was reminiscent of one of Don Rickles' more bawdy Las Vegas show numbers. At first confused and hesitant, he received his on-set instructions and bloomed in his premier performance with gusto.

The amazing thing is, they did it! They covered all of old Will's "Complete Works," saving "Hamlet" for destruction and dissection until after the intermission.

As always, the work from the booth by lighting designer Ed Hill was flawless. Of course, the lighting operator too required some disciplinary prompting from stage center as to where to cast appropriate spotlighting.

ONE FINAL NOTE: Be sure to catch all the cartoon props planted on the property. My favorite is a cut-out of Shakespeare.

The balloon reads, "I will be revenged on the whole pack of you."

And so he was. Joyously.

Three Carmelites tell the true story of the infamous Flora Woods

'STEINBECK CALLED HER MADAM' MUSICAL PREMIERES WEDNESDAY AT BRUCE ARISS WHARF THEATER

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

CALL THEM Madam: from Heidi Fleiss and Sally Stanford to Sydney Biddle Barrows. These women with pronounced business acumen occupy a special niche in our national consciousness. In "Cannery Row," John Steinbeck used his friend Flora Woods as the prototype for Dora Flood, the fictional bordello madam.

What few know about Monterey's colorful madam is that she hailed from a respectable Big Sur family. Woods established reputable businesses run by her daughters, and gave generously to good works.

This benevolent and honorable side to Flora Woods is brought to the fore in playwright Jerami Ross' script for "Steinbeck Called Her Madam," a musical revue in two acts. It will premiere at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Monterey's Bruce Ariss Theater on Old Fisherman's Wharf.

In the show, Flora reminisces about the good times and the many characters she came in contact with on Cannery Row. Others in the cast are Flora's "best girl," Phyliss Mae, played by Sandy Sidener; bouncer Spicer, portrayed by Jose Lambert; driver Fritz, interpreted by Robert Basgall; and Annie Star in the role of "the delicate and lovely" Lottie O'Reilly.

According to Carmel's Jerry Walker, managing partner of the production company, Flora was born in the 1870s in Big Sur. Her father was a Portuguese whaling captain and her mother was a Castilian Spaniard.

"Flora had two completely different personas," Walker told The Pine Cone this week. "By day, she was the business partner of locals, and by night she ran the famous Lone Star, which was a night club as well as being a bordello.

"The other businesses she owned," Walker continued, "included the El Estero Grill, Phil and Ida's — a daytime breakfast and luncheonette named after her daughter and son-in-law who ran it — and the Golden Stairs night club. She was the proprietor of a clothing store, which her other daughter managed, and she owned all the taxis in Monterey, too.

"Her era ran from about 1921 to 1948, and during the Depression she provided food and groceries for many families — without them knowing it — and she gave money to local parks anonymously."

According to Walker, there is a great deal of folklore about Flora Woods, but he finds her true story far more interesting.

"The first major story that ever ran in the Monterey Herald read, 'Flora Woods goes to trial for selling liquor,'" Walker said. "She was always borderline on that kind of thing."

Audiences will not only be treated to half a century of Cannery Row history and colorful characters, but also, according to Walker, "a glimpse toward the Row's future."

Broadway's Marion Marlowe

The musical revue, based on Flora's career as a madam, stars Marion Marlowe in the title role. Marlowe has more than 20 Broadway shows to her credit, including the part of Aldonza in the national road company's production of "Man of La Mancha," in which she also appeared for two years at the Curran Theater in San Francisco; and a three-year run as the duchess with Mary Martin in "The Sound of Music." She was with the Ed Sullivan Show for 11 years and Arthur Godfrey and Friends for seven years.

The Nick Williams Trio will provide music for the production, and while the music has not been written for the play,

ANNE AND ALAIN CAVROT discuss the acrylic paintings by French artist Thé, displayed in the main salon of La Provence Art Gallery which they have just opened on Lincoln, south of Ocean. Thé is known for her scenes of Provence framed in three unique fashions. Carmel artist Natalie Reed's paintings of France are also displayed. Both artists and Reed's cat, Fifille, will be on hand for today's 5 o'clock reception.

Touch of Provence conveyed by Carmel's newest gallery

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

TWO BELGIAN-BORN art lovers visited Carmel-by-the-Sea this spring for the first time, fell in love with it, returned to their home in Paris, and made plans to open a gallery here.

Impulsive decision? Perhaps, but Anne and Alain Cavrot know a good thing when they see it, and they followed their hearts to Carmel.

Their salon, La Provence·Art Gallery — located in Morgan Court on the north side of Lincoln Street between Ocean and Seventh — opened this month and brings with it the atmosphere of the south of France.

Two artists, one French, the other American, — who confine their artistic output to scenes of Provence, Giverny and Paris — are featured at the gallery and will be feted at a reception today from 5 to 8 p.m to which the general public is invited.

Switched allegiance

The French artist, who is known simply as Thé, created designs for silk scarves for Christian Dior, Nina Ricci, Jean Patou and Rochas. In the '80s she switched allegiance from oil paintings to acrylics when she became enamored with this medium used by artists in the Vaucluse and Lubéron, where she resides. Since then, she has exhibited her works, always with a Provençal theme, in Paris and Provence.

Thé, who arrived from France yesterday, will be on hand to discuss her use of color, which she refers to as her "natural language." She says she seeks to bring together "the lavender blues, the gentle green of mimosa and warm lightness of the Provençal sun" to her paintings.

Thé employs three distinct framing methods for her acrylics: She extends the canvas scenes directly out onto the frames, creating a 3-D effect; employs shadow boxes which echo the predominant colors of the canvases they frame; and enhances traditional French ornate gilt frames with touches of color found in the paintings

Natalie Reed makes her home in Carmel, but on frequent trips to France creates paintings in both oils and acrylics. She will be seen at the gallery from 5 o'clock today painting a scene in which "Fifille," her cat, will be featured. Fifille stays with Reed when she paints in Monet's gardens at Giverny.

Reed specializes in scenes of Provence, Paris and Giverny and chooses traditional French frames to complement her paintings.

BARGAINS IN BOOKS AT BENEFIT

FRIENDS of the Harrison Memorial Library will again present the annual book sale that benefits that institution.

The sale is open to the general public 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday. Sale location is Carpenter Hall in Sunset Center, Mission Street at Eighth Avenue in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Expect books on all subjects to add to your home collection.

In Bali they climbed a mountainside to paint Ulun Danu Temple on the shores of a lake in Bedugul. In Greece they painted at Delphi and at Cape Sounion's Temple of Poseidon.

Bleich has been a frequent visitor to Monet's gardens in Giverny. On this family trip, his sons were permitted to paint there, also.

"Jonathan was probably one of the youngest artists to paint at Monet's pond in Giverny," Bleich said. "Christopher found painting in Giverny and the environs of Normandy more awe-inspiring."

All three were allowed to paint in Monet's gardens after they were closed for the day to tourists, and were dinner guests of Gilbert Vahe, who restored the gardens, and Madame Vahe.

Bleich, who has maintained his gallery in Carmel since 1969, is an impressionist who is billed at his gallery as a master painter of natural light.

A two-hour video of their adventure and paintings — which also includes scenes from Bleich's former painting trips to Italy, the south of France and the Hawaiian Islands — and some of his original poems and songs, will be available for purchase at the gallery.

The three-man exhibit runs through Sept. 28.

oven-pit roasted wild boar as the main course. They fix the boar luau-style, by cooking it slowly underground. Saturday's menu includes beef tri tips, barbecued beans and salad. It is enough to bring tears of joy to a cowboy's eyes.

Valley Ranch Joes

Like all brisket recipes, this one feeds a crowd. The barbecue meat mixture, however, keeps well in the refrigerator, or may be frozen in an airtight container, in case you have a small brood.

1 cup red wine
3 garlic cloves, pureed
1 3-lb. beef brisket
2 cups barbecue sauce
1-1/2 cups water
1/4 cup chili sauce
1/4 cup Worcestershire sauce
generous dash of hot sauce
1-1/2 Tbsp. vegetable oil
1 onion, cut into rings
12 large sourdough rolls

Whisk together red wine and garlic puree. Place brisket in a dish or a large resealable plastic bag. Pour wine mixture over brisket. If using a dish, cover. Allow brisket to marinate for at least 1 hour in the refrigerator.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Discard marinating liquid. Place brisket in a roasting pan. Bake for 2 hours uncovered, turning once. Drain off excess fat.

The Bohemian Gourmet

Whisk together barbecue sauce, water, chili sauce, Worcestershire sauce and hot sauce. Pour over brisket. Reduce oven temperature to 300 degrees, cover brisket and cook for 2 additional hours. Add extra water, if needed, while baking.

Remove meat from sauce. Cut into small shreds. Place shredded meat back into sauce. Wrap sourdough rolls in foil. Place meat, along with rolls, back into the oven to warm.

Meanwhile, saute onion rings in vegetable oil over medium high heat in a saute pan until they caramelize.

To serve, place caramelized onion rings in rolls. Spoon barbecued brisket mixture over onion.

Makes 12 servings

Campfire Barbecued Baked Beans

You may already have a version of this potluck classic stashed away in your recipe files. Sweet, smoky and savory, this dish makes a perfect accompaniment for all sorts of barbecued meats and vegetables.

1 cup barbecue sauce
1 onion, chopped
1/2 cup dark brown sugar
1/3 cup molasses
1/2 tsp. liquid smoke
2 large cans (about 1 lb. 5 ounces each) baked beans.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Stir barbecue sauce, onion, brown sugar, molasses and liquid smoke together in a bowl. Stir in beans.

Pour bean mixture into a buttered casserole dish. Bake for 20 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

THEATER REVIEW

Rarely staged 'Shenandoah' rated as a 'must-see'

By JAMES P. KINNEY

OF THE MANY musicals I have watched or performed in as actor and singer over the years, only a handful possess a quality to engage, challenge and energize both cast and audience to a degree that transcends mere entertainment.

To this very select list I must add "Shenandoah" in a powerful production experienced on the Main Stage at Monterey Peninsula College. Directed by Tom McKenzie with music direction by Barney Hulse and richly choreographed by Susan Cable, "Shenandoah" is the story of Charlie Anderson (John Newkirk), a wealthy Virginia widower farmer, father of six sons and one daughter. Anderson is determined to keep his family from being dragged into the Civil War raging around them.

"I've got just enough belief in me to know God didn't create war," the strong-minded patriarch whispers to his deceased wife, Martha, in one of several poignant soliloquies. "I'm not about to go out and hunt strangers down to kill 'em," he tells his youngest son, 12-year-old Robert (Andrew Dahl). "That's what war is, Boy. Open Season on strangers."

"Virginia needs all her sons, Mr. Anderson," a Rebel Sergeant (Greg Adler), suggests. "That may be, but these are my sons," the protective father replies.

And yet this is hardly a one-theme anti-war screed. In the hands of talented directors and a hard-working cast, the stage is often alive with diverse movement, color and energy.

At times it explodes into fun and laughter. Witty, brilliant things are expressed and shared about religion, family, love, race and the eternal War Between the Sexes. "Shenandoah" is a show wealthy in important themes.

"Women expect things they never ask for," Anderson humorously lectures Sam (Todd Estabrooks), the young suitor asking for his daughter's hand. "And when they don't get them, they ask you why. Sometimes they don't even ask. They just go ahead and punish you." Hearty chuckles of recognition greeted this clever scene.

The singing is often lusty, often tender, often incredibly insightful. "What was the dyin for?/ The livin' can't remember/ the dead no longer care," sings Newkirk early on in "I've Heard It All Before." His rich baritone resonates throughout the show, now pleading, now demanding, finally all but crushed with sorrow, shaping the central action in a bravo, nuanced performance.

But there are other outstanding performances as well. From the opening vocal number, disciplined movement and musical crispness show clearly as two male choruses, dressed as Confederate and Union soldiers, taunt each other.

Sons Jacob (John Gary Pullen), James (Richard Boynton), Nathan (Bradford Shreve), John (Jamie Brandt) and Henry (Aric R. Peck) do a high-energy, high-stepping song-and-dance in "Next to Lovin' I Like Fightin" crowd-pleaser bursting with sheer male energy and hijinks.

And the female leads do splendidly as well. Daughter Jenny (Melissa Delilah Jorgensen) sparkles in every scene she's in — spunky line delivery here, engagingly endearing there, as in her choice duet, "We Make a Wonderful Pair" with sister-in-law Anne (Lyn Whiting).

Both are excellent vocally. And veteran Whiting is wonderfully dependable, mature and tender throughout, especially in the sassy cakewalk duet, "Freedom," with young Gabriel (Arthur Waldrup) that kick starts Act Two.

But if the show has a definitive show-stopper, it has to be young, totally engaging Messers. Waldrup and Dahl in "Why Am I Me." These very talented youngsters carried off important roles with style and intelligence. Let's watch them!

Brian Maples, in a clear, God-given tenor voice, made his own musical statement as the "Lonely Corporal," offering a unique audience gift in his haunting "The Only Home I Know."

Sum-up: The 1975 rarely performed musical, "Shenandoah," in a sensitive, lovingly staged and meticulously performed production at Monterey Peninsula College's Main Stage is a must-see. I highly recommend it.

Red Holloway — Fri. August 22

Red Holloway is a Jazz Veteran, developed his great Tenor and Alto styles through the 50s and 60s playing in groups including those of Lionel Hampton, Dexter Gordon, "Brother" Jack McDuff and Clark Terry. Having backed singers like Billy Holiday and Carmen McRae, Red has DONE IT ALL! His latest release is on Concord records titled Locksmith Blues with the Clark Terry Sextet.

Jeff Hamilton Trio — Sat. August 23

Drummer Jeff Hamilton will debut at the JAZZ STORE with his own trio after years of backing up numerous big bands and other groups. After drumming for Monty Alexander and Woody Herman, he joined Laurendo Almeida, Ray Brown, and Bud Shank in the group, The L.A. 4. He has recorded with Mel Torme, Scott Hamilton, Dave Frishberg, and the Clayton-Hamilton Orchestra, among many others. Its Hamilton Time is his most recent recording.

Kenny Rankin Quartet — Sat. August 30

Kenny Rankin music is straight to the heart and always entrancing, and his stage presence is highly entertaining and warm. With a brand new Private Music CD called Here In My Heart, Rankin will no doubt feature some new material as well as old favorites.

Mark Murphy — Fri./Sat. Sept. 5/6

Mark Murphy, voted best male jazz vocalist in last year's Down Beat poll, is simply one of the purest and most swinging and expressive jazz singer performing these days. With a deep baritone voice, Murphy is a great showman and always delivers a lyric with deep understanding. His most current release, I'll Close My Eyes is available on the Muse label. Don't miss this highly entertaining night of jazz and blues.

Restaurant

Feature of the Week:

Cafe Stravaganza

The unbeatable blend of sunny days and inspired Mediterranean cuisine offer perfect excuses to amble over to Café Stravaganza. Dine indoors in your choice of colorful dining rooms or select a spot out on the patio and see what Fuad Bahou and Debby Corlew have dreamt up for today.

Café Stravaganza tempts diners with a menu that is not merely scrumptious but also health-aware. And the menu is indeed large and tempting. In addition to daily specials, there are such staples as pasta dishes, seafood, pizzas, exotic burgers, and Fuad's cheesecakes that are baked on a whim. These include such flavors as double chocolate espresso and pear/pistachio. The restaurant is open for lunch and dinner daily.

"Our regular menu is so large that we like to do individualized menus for parties," explains Debby Corlew, co-owner. Personalized service is central to Café Stravaganza, as is the concept of preparing everything from scratch.

"We'll gladly do specialty cooking," the manager says. "Say, if you're diabetic or have special dietary needs, we have no trouble cooking without salt, oil or butter. The staff and kitchen understand and support that. We can create from the ingredients on our menu."

For that special event, the restaurant has its separate, semi-private Studio Room. Or reserve the entire setting with its convenient location and easy parking.

Café Stravaganza is in the large building at the end of Crossroads Boulevard in the Crossroads Shopping Center, Carmel. Look for the blue and white striped awnings.

WHY LICENSE YOUR PET

At The SPCA we often get questions from pet owners about the need for licenses. Here are our best reasons for getting your pet a license:

1. It's the law.

2. A dog license may be the only thing that reunites you with your pet when it is lost! A license speaks for your pet, telling animal care workers who you are and how to contact you. Overcrowded shelters can only hold stray pets a limited time, at The SPCA of Monterey County shelter that is 72 hours. But a dog with a license is held for 10 days while efforts are made to return the pet to it's rightful owner!

3. A license also proves your pet has been vaccinated against rabies.

The SPCA has a free handout, "Where do you buy a dog license!" for anyone with questions about getting a license.

And tags aren't just for dogs! The SPCA recommends giving cats ID tags, too, and suggests pet owners consider safe and permanent microchip IDs for all pets.

We make a donation to The SPCA the first time you use our service.

Williams will draw on such existing pieces as "Sentimental Journey" and "The Best is Yet to Come," to name only two well-known numbers that have been woven into the plot.

The musical is the result of a partnership — Broadway West Productions — that was formed specifically for this production, according to the managing partner.

"The partnership is made up of a number of business people," Walker told The Pine Cone. "Ninety percent of them are locals."

Director Lucretia Butler, who is also the choreographer, and Musical Director Nick Williams are both Carmel residents and are engaged in rehearsals daily in Carlson Hall at The Church of the Wayfarer.

Walker has been involved in the local theater community since the early '80s, and independently took the production of "Beyond Therapy" to San Francisco where it ran for six years.

Following "Madam's" three-month run at the Bruce Ariss Theater, the musical will move to Cannery Row where it will become a permanent presentation of the area's history, catering to visitors, conventions and other groups.

A portion of all royalties and fees from the musical have been pledged to the Cannery Row Foundation in Flora's name, a nice turnabout for the woman who gave so much anonymously.

Curtain times are 8 p.m. Wednesdays through Saturdays and 7 p.m. Sundays.

For information call 620-0855.

Gilroy's Garlic Fest: Malodorous but divine

THE NUMBERS are in on the Gilroy Garlic Festival and they're amazing: 122,000 attendees consumed 24,000 pounds of garlicky trimmed beef, 7,000 pounds of calamari, 3,500 pounds scampi, almost 8,000 loaves of garlic bread and a total of 5,041 pounds of the lusty star of the day. A new gimmick for this year was a Garlic Kiss-Off won by Sweet Breath. The manufacturer also distributed 50,000 sample bottles of the breath deodorizer. Wow!

Traveling Gourmet

By Lotte Mendelsohn

Local favorite to be smokily honored

Bert Cutino, restaurateur/real estate mogul and celebrity chef, is not only respected but beloved by the hospitality industry, both locally and nationally. His accessibility to all youngsters coming up in the industry, and his generosity to charitable causes are legendary. It's therefore more than fitting that a fund raiser for the Monterey County Film Commission and the California Culinary Academy honor Bert tomorrow with a black tie gala at the smashing new Hammon Prescott Gallery in Monterey.

My personal sadness is that the event's theme "Smokin' the Bay," glorifies my own cause celebre— "D.C." (Demon Cigars). For all you "suckers of the stogie," there'll be a performing cigar roller on hand and each guest gets to take home five premium La Plaata smokes and a cigar starter kit. There's also to be an auction of cigar "art." Some reservations may still be available for the $135 per person event: call 372-2406.

P.S. Please folks, do another benefit soon to extol the virtues of non-smokers, so that our young people have a good example to follow.

Virgin nuts debuted

The line forms at the right! Our own Peninsula gourmet oils' maven, Betty Pustarfi, has begun local distribution of French Press of Atwater, unfiltered virgin nut oils. The first press filbert, pecan and walnut oils are specially processed for maximum flavor and packaged in clay containers to protect them from light and extend their shelf lives. Each container carries a "best used by date." For more information and orders call Betty at 372-6682 or attend one of her free tastings at the Bountiful Basket in the Crossroads each Friday and Saturday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. See adapted recipe below.

Thoughts While Cooking

I seem to be still on the quality of noise kick. I wonder if the incessant back-up beeps of the heavy equipment being used on a new construction down the hill from us has anything to do with it?

Stew-ing Symphonically

Symphony and good jazz are intellect-stimulators for most of us. While humming along with the musical greats, I find all the little "upstairs gray cells" in syncopated harmony with the beat. As far as kitchen creativity is concerned, one good thing seems to lead to another. The spices fly, the wine flows, I happily mix and stir — all's right with the world, both the symphony and my stew. To me, the kitchen requires musical background. But I've noticed, that if the decibels are a mite high, I simply can't concentrate.

Music with a meal can be a double-edged sword, depending on the music and the meal. Red hot jazz is perfect with coffee or brandy or can be a between-meal stimulant, but serve it with my dinner and you've lost me! Conversely, after dinner, chamber-type strains put me sweetly to sleep. They don't seem to make for scintillating dessert conversation.

Other folks' work habits are always of great interest to me. Busy to me requires blessed quiet. My husband's genius allows him to outline a seminar or draft a complicated report to the sweet accompaniment of a rowdy football game ... yet if I interrupt with a question, I am fixed with a disapproving stare and shushed. Sound familiar?

Yet, a whole generation of young folk studied their way to impressive degrees with a driving rock beat! What it's really all about is custom and habit; though there are extensive studies being conducted by scientists of many nations as to the long-range effect of noise on the human body and spirit.

One study conducted many years ago at Harvard correlated noise acceptance to intelligence. It propounded that the greater the decibel tolerance the lower the I.Q. Would like to get my hands on the study test results. Interesting thesis, and one wonders about the research M.O. and validation.

Shall we all be deaf in five years? I remember picking up two members of a teenage band after a high school dance. They piled into the car and sat like zombies all the way home. As they unfolded themselves and their instruments from our van's rear seat, we turned to ask why they had been so silent.

"What?" they boomed. We repeated the question realizing that we had not been heard. These beautiful youngsters regularly suffered temporary deafness after each performance!! Weren't they worried about permanent damage? Some adults ask the dumbest questions!

So much for the language of the muses. Guess I'll go back to my Bach and Bechet, and the beat that most moves me is the rhythm of a whisk in my stainless steel bowl!

Country Bean Salad with Virgin Walnut Oil Vinaigrette

1 quart water
1/3 cup dry beans (such as Great Northern)
1 tomato, diced
1/4 cup Balsamic vinegar
1/2 cup virgin walnut oil
1/2 minced garlic clove
Salt and pepper to taste

Soak the beans in water to cover for one hour. Pour off water and bring the fresh water to a rapid boil, drop in the beans and diced tomato and bring rapidly back to the boil. Boil uncovered for two minutes. Remove pot from heat. Cover and let soak for one hour. Mix the dressing. Drain the beans and pour the dressing on the hot beans. Serves 4.

Happy 97th, Hella Langer

promotions — or even the job, itself.

Occasionally, you may think you are giving the boss a compliment, but he (she) may take it all wrong, and you could find yourself on a corner trying to think up a clever "Will Work for Food" sign.

HERE then are 10 Top Things Never to Say to the Boss:

10- "WAS THAT your wife that was just in here talking to you, sir? She's got one great bod, doesn't she?"

This may not only embarrass the boss, it could also make him suspicious about your great interest in his wife.

IF you're in sales, you may marvel at the speed with which you find yourself replacing Karkovski in the Siberian territory.

9- "I'VE HEARD that electrolysis really works."

You may think you're being real helpful to your female boss by telling her this, but believe me, it will not be appreciated.

Neither will hints about deodorants, breath fresheners or flatulence inhibitors.

8- "HOW ABOUT us doing lunch together today, sir (or m'am)?"

A very impertinent suggestion. First off, your boss considers you about 95 rungs below him (her) on the social ladder.

And secondly, you failed to say YOU would buy. Although he (she) makes 260 times more money than you do, he considers it a badge of honor that he has never once picked up a check in the 22 years he's been with the company!

Our advice — forget it.

7- "OF ALL the people in the building, the one I'd most like to get in the closet alone with is Estelle (or Larry)!"

The boss doesn't want to hear this, because he dreads a sexual harassment suit against the company.

Not only that, but he, too, may have had designs on Estelle (and Larry) and was turned down flat by both, so he'll be damned if he's going to let YOU show him up!

Keep your fantasies to yourself.

6- "WOW! I've never seen anyone in my life with that much ear hair!"

Not a wise thing to bring up, even if you're genuinely blown away. References to nose hair should also be avoided.

And do NOT take Polaroids of such phenomena to show around the office, proudly or not.

5- "HOW in the name of Ned could you promote that hopeless noodle, Rinktum, ahead of ME? He's only been here a week! What is he, your nephew?"

No. Unfortunately these people always turn out to be the son-in-law. But never, NEVER ask.

4- "ANY CHANCE of getting an advance on my paycheck this week? My bookie (mistress, bartender, collection agency, etc.) is really getting hard-nosed about the whopping bundle I owe!"

This, too, is something the boss doesn't want to hear. It makes you appear desperate for money and he may conclude you'll do ANYTHING to get it.

Which you probably will, but why put him on guard? Keep your money woes to yourself.

3- "THIS NEW project you assigned me is for the birds. I haven't even started it yet, but I think I feel a stress attack coming on. Give it to Rinktum."

This attitude shows the boss you are not a "team player," and you probably just blew your chances of making the company softball team.

As for your suggestion that he assign the project to Rinktum — do you really have a death wish, so far as this job is concerned?

2- "I DON'T know how you feel about pot, sir, but if you're ever running on empty, my stash is your stash!"

As tempting as this may sound to some bosses, NONE of them will ever admit they're interested.

So you simply open yourself up for a lecture on the evils of drugs — a lecture that will inevitably end with, "If you're ever caught here with pot or anything else, you're gone!"

1- "I SEE by the paper that Jenny Craig is just starting a new class tomorrow night. I hear the meals are great!"

Button your lip. The boss does not think HE is fat, nor his wife, Titanic, either.

For you to imply otherwise could earn you a plane ticket to join that fella in sales who is on his way to replace Karkovski!

ALL RIGHT, good luck! (And keep your resume current.)

TODAY'S QUOTE . . . John Steinbeck:

"The tools I need for my trade are paper, tobacco, food, and a little whiskey."

THESE FOOLISH THINGS . . . Virginia Johnson of Monterey wants to know:

"In those many TV commercials for the Monterey law firm of Spiering, Swartz & Kennedy, where in the Sam Hill is Swartz?

"THERE'S Spiering to the right of us, Kennedy to the left of us," says Virginia, "but Swartz never appears!

"Is there really a Swartz?"

YES, Virginia, there IS a Swartz — Andy Swartz — but he just doesn't want to be on television, according to the Kennedy (that's Michele Kennedy).

However, Virginia, if you can't stand the deprivation of not knowing what old Andy looks like, there's a picture of him on page 40 in the Yellow Pages! (That's he on the left.)

ONE of America's most amazing retailers — no, forget "one of," and let's just say, THE most amazing retailer in the U.S. — is having a birthday Monday!

And believe me, this IS news.

FOR the retailer we're talking about is Carmel's incredible Hella Langer, whose Langer's Antiques is located on Dolores just south of Ocean, and who will turn 97 on Monday!

This is no coupon-clipping, sit-at-home-eating-bonbons type of retailer. Hella has been actively holding forth in the shop six days a week for 40 years! And she knows every detail about every piece of merchandise in the store!

DROP in there Monday between 2 and 4 p.m. and wish her happy birthday!

But don't stay long — she's got CUSTOMERS to serve, you know!

LASTLY . . . Terrible Teri, the astounding detective, reports from San Francisco that the Monterey Peninsula's chances of luring the 49ers here annually for preseason training are remote.

Front runners for a new camp site (to replace Rocklin) seem to be Stockton (Univ. of the Pacific) and Reno (Univ. of Nevada-Reno).

PENINSULA movers and shakers have been trying to interest the team in a site at former Fort Ord, but the Terrible One says the Niners privately feel it would be too costly to install the facilities they would need here.

Okay, it's a long shot, but as the battered, stressed-out folks around the Herald have learned about life — you never know, you just never know.

La Provence
ART GALLERY

The owners of a brand new Gallery in Carmel, Anne and Alain Cavrot, brand new to this country as well, invite you to their Grand Opening tonight from 5 to 8 pm. Two exhibiting artists will be present. Thé, from Paris, who paints with charm and such vibrant colors you feel you're in Provence (you'll love her special touch with 3-dimensional frames!) and Carmel's Natalie Reed - who will have her cat, Fifille, with her, as she is whenever Natalie paints Monet's gardens. Both artists will be painting. Consider LA PROVENCE Art Gallery Carmel's latest treasure, and enjoy it tonight! On Lincoln, between Ocean & 7th. Morgan Court. 620-0230.

catherine's

Nothing stops catherine's, including the UPS strike! She has currently brought back (by hand) attractive three-piece pant and skirt sets from last week's fall buying trip in L.A. These pair beautifully with chenille sweaters, layering pieces, etc! Something new - get a free manicure from Exolance (next door) with $150 purchase (excluding sale items). Gorgeous, timeless styles and service that is extraordinary. Yes, catherine's serves your needs now, as she will in the future, as she has in the past. 405 Calle Principal, Monterey, 646-1565.

In an ever-growing industry such as carpet cleaning, it's not surprising to find companies who formulate spotting agents and claim they remove everything from oil to pets' stains. THE BELMONT METHOD spot remover, "Simply Gone" is second to none. Hundreds of customers wouldn't use anything else. No steam, no soap, no caustics, powders or phosphates. Try it and I'm sure you'll agree it's the best! I think so! Call 625-3242 to order.

You'll be glad to hear that TOWN OR TRAVEL is ready for fall - and you! You'll find an attractive collection of Schrader dresses, mostly 1-piece, in rich, dark Fall colors; handsome separates from Leon Levin, including pant suits, in charcoal, gray, black, khaki and mallard green, and pin wheel corduroy in small multi-plaids and solids. Bleyle's in, too. Beautiful double-knit wool pants in light gray, burgundy, winter white and black, also tiny checks. The summer clearance sale is still on - a rack of items 1/2 off! And summer's still here! Mission betwn. 5th & 6th, on walkway toward San Carlos. 626-0276.

Amanda Lawford's Carmel Needle Arts

As you know, every canvas at CARMEL NEEDLE ARTS is hand painted by artists near and far. The owner of this shop, Amanda Lawford, contributes numerous designs of her own, and so she's having a Trunk Show, next Friday, Aug. 29 and Saturday, Aug. 30. Be sure to come see Amanda's beautiful canvases and save 20% off any of her designs in stock! This shop radiates color and activity and with one step inside, if you're not already a needlepointer, you'll want to become one! It's not too late to start a small Christmas project like an ornament or mini-stocking! Mission Patio Shops, Mission, betwn. 5th & 6rh, Carmel. 626-1545.

Parsley Sage & Thyme

PARSLEY SAGE AND THYME, the new shop in the Crossroads devoted to fine kitchenware and gifts, is a browsing delight, and very addictive! From the many gadgets up to the solid maple butcher blocks, expect to find what you need and/or what you want! Just in, two very special showpieces - a lobster and crab hand carved from Peru - great decor for a kitchen wall! Need wooden salad bowls, dishwasher safe? Leather pot holders, flexible and washing machine safe? How about some some special seasonings or for your next grilling, wine vines? Butcher block anyone? The Crossroads, near Mailboxes, Etc. 620-0515.

LOES HINSE
TIMELESS DESIGNS

LOES HINSE (pronounced Luce Hinsa) announces her new fall designs. She's excited about them and you will be, too! You'll find more dress and jacket coordinates than ever before in many more colors - tones of brown, eggplant, cabbage, and dirty gold to mention a few. "Pants are particularly good this year," she says, though of course she's staying with her long, attractive skirts, as well. A great chance to do tone on tone or interesting mixes in color and fabric, and remember, Loes is there with her artistic eye to help you create the right look for you! Tues-Sat. 12 to 6, Sun. 12 to 4. 542 Lighthouse, Monterey. 373-7553.

I promise - one phone call to SARAH LIVINGSTON, Holistic Therapist, and you'll be forever grateful. Sarah has trained in Hawaii and is certified in the ancient art of Hawaiian Lomi-Lomi, a unique massage involving a connection of body, mind and spirit. It's an attitude on the part of the therapist whose hands radiate energy, strength and trust, in turn bringing you magnificent relaxation and calm. After many requests, Sarah is now offering private massage classes to individual couples. Be sure to ask about that when you make your appointment! M.I.T. Health Center in Mid-Valley, 644-6600, or at the Beach Club, as a member or guest of Pebble Beach Lodge, 625-8536.

The Shop in the Garden

It's such a pleasure to stroll through THE SHOP IN THE GARDEN because as you stroll, your mind plays tricks - you feel far away in an exotic garden, hardly in the heart of Carmel! Though everything here is fascinating, take special looks at the many fountains. Most of these, and there are possibly hundreds, have been made on the premises. Of copper or brass, some with a turquoise patina, they range from $250 to $5000, many with a whimsical look (otter, fish, swan, etc.), all with the soothing trickle and splash of water. For indoors or outdoors, come take a stroll! Flo reports new "gazing balls" have arrived. Lincoln, so of Ocean, Carmel. 624-6047.

Shirley Loomis
CALLIGRAPHER

You'd be smart to make note of this: the next time you need invitations, placecards, wedding envelopes, certificates, special quote or poem, or anything that requires beautiful writing - call SHIRLEY LOOMIS, CALLIGRAPHER. Shirley does custom work in the calligraphy style of your choice, exclusively for you. She does it by hand, not a computer, and you'll see instantly that her writing has soul. She's a busy calligrapher, so allow as much time as possible, but be assured you work gets done on time! Clip and save, or call now for an appointment. 625-2810.

Been to the Hans Skalagard Exhibit at the MARITIME MUSEUM OF MONTEREY? A beautiful collection of his paintings, detailing the history of Old Ironsides, will be on view through October. Don't miss them!

Flo Lyle from Los Angeles came to the Concours Italiano for the third year with her gorgeous greyhound/deer hound "Ngeza," who carries his own backpack with food and water. "Nothing would make me miss this event " said Lyle.

'VRROOM' reads the license plate of this Ferrari last Friday at the Concours Italiano held at Quail Lodge in Carmel Valley.

REGION TRANSPORTS CAR LOVERS TO AUTOMOTIVE HEAVEN

WELL, THIS was a week to knock your socks off, with restaurants opening and fabulous car events. Even Pacific Grove hosted a car parade.

A Saks model shows off a faux leopard jacket on the runway Friday, Aug. 15 at the Concours Italiano at the Quail Lodge in Carmel Valley.

■ Le Coq D'or reopens with a thank you party!

Instead of helmets, fire retardant gear and rubber boots, members of Carmel's Fire Department wore civilian clothing as they entered one of Carmel's most popular bistros — Le Coq D'or — to enjoy a magnificent repast, hosted by proprietors Annelore and Lorie Parsons. Also invited were John and Nora Espinoza. This group literally saved the lovely European-style restaurant from burning to the ground.

Nora, who lives above Le Coq D'or, says she felt "heat" coming from the restaurant two months ago. When she and her husband investigated, they found smoke rising from the kitchen, and voila! Fifteen firefighters were there within three minutes to extinguish a blaze that nearly leveled the dinner house. A corroded gas pipe was the culprit.

Included among the heroes was general contractor Ben Compagno, who did fine work clearing the restaurant of fire, smoke and water damage.

The Parsons prepared a scrumptious turkey dinner (with gravy to-die-for), for almost 30 guests. The meal started with a light Alsatian onion tart and concluded with a delightful strawberry tart.

The R.H. Phillips Chardonnay served during dinner was another reason to return to this lovely little restaurant which features both German and French cuisine.

Because of all of the above people, Le Coq D'or is again open, and the Parsons are once more offering their French Coq Au Vin and German Wiener Schnitzel to loyal patrons. The restaurant has a very pretty Alps mountain ambience, with cowbells hanging from the ceiling and lovely flowered upholstery. It has been a Carmel fixture for more than 40 years.

■ Concours Italiano ever colorful and fashionable

The wonderful aspect of the car events that make up the Monterey Motoring Week is that, because each has a completely different format, they are not competing with each other. It is a joy and a challenge to attend each one.

The Concours Italiano, founded 11 years ago by Francis and Janet Mandarano of Mercer Island, Wash., emphasizes appreciation of Italian style. Judges don't labor over cars looking for imperfections. Trophies are awarded in non-judged categories — best of show in autos and motorcycles — by representatives from the car clubs and exhibitors. It's a relaxed, fun event.

This year, the cars honored on the gorgeous green lawns of the Quail Lodge Golf Club were from DeTomaso Automobili, and as usual, 30,000 or more people converged there. They gazed awe struck at the Lamborghinis, Fiats, Ferraris, Alfa Romeos and many other exotics.

Throughout the day, examples of all the Italian cars passed through the staging area with humorous commentaries from Master of Ceremonies Alan Richmond, Keith Martin, Mandarano and other experts. Hundreds of people, including Carmel Mayor Ken White and his wife Jean, sitting in bleachers, watched and laughed along with the owners of the cars when they mentioned prices like $125,000, leather-covered TV sets and other elegant accouterments, as Martin interviewed them.

The Italian Runway Fashion Show presented by Saks Fifth Avenue was, for the second year, an overwhelming favorite of hundreds. Saks clothing always features a wonderfully simple, but elegant look. And, of course, the leggy models added to that image, wearing long black form-fitting gowns, suits and slack suits, and fabulous furs.

The Concours Italiano is sponsored by The Peninsula Group whose properties include the Quail Lodge Resort and Golf Club.

Along the perimeter of the car show were many tents featuring Italian foods, T-shirts and Italian car memorabilia .

The Concours Italiano benefits Friends of Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS), with more than $110,000 raised in the last four years.

A Youth Design Contest, wherein children in grades 6 through 12 design cars, sparked great interest in the Concours this year, and will continue.

I left as Dean Martin's rendition of "That's Amore" was played, with beautiful models tossing confetti into the air. What a way to end a beautiful day. Ciao, Concours Italiano!

■ Cars and car buffs invade the peninsula

The old axiom "All roads lead to Rome," can now be used for the Monterey Peninsula. With major car gatherings for thousands of collectors and auto buffs staged here last weekend, we can safely rephrase it, "All cars of every design, make and vintage came to Carmel Valley and Pebble Beach!"

The 47th Annual Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance is a case in point.

This year, besides celebrating the 100th anniversary of the Oldsmobile and Stanley, they showcased steam-powered cars and Aston-Martin automobiles, long associated with wealth, speed and comfort.

This happy presentation benefited the United Way and The Pebble Beach Foundation which has contributed more than $4.5 million to local charities.

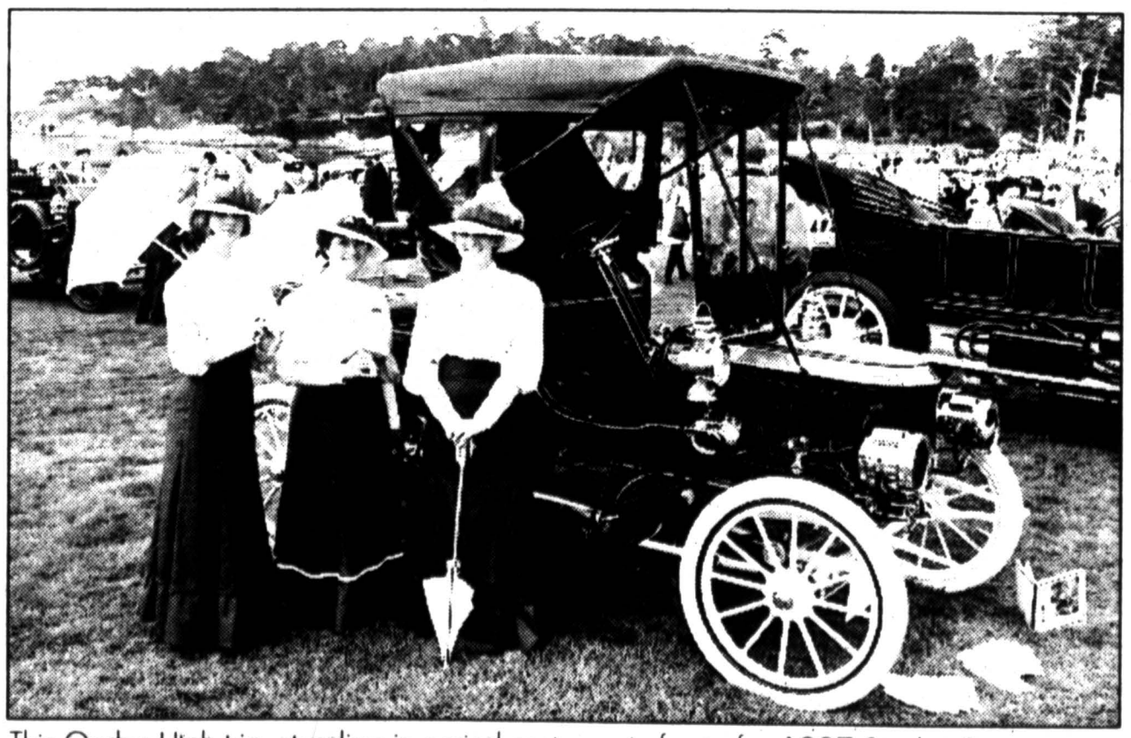
Several microcars were on display at the 47th Annual Concours d'Elegance last weekend. The cars feature two wheels front and one wheel in the back for a single driver/passenger.



This Ogden,Utah trio, standing in period costumes in front of a 1907 Stanley Steamer are: Linsey Robinson, Nelda Foster and Marisa Slack. A relative called K.B. Foster bought the car in Dexter, New York in 1925 for $10.

were classes of exotic and vintage cars including historic hot rods, micro cars, steam cars, and open-wheel race cars, Rolls Royces, Duesenbergs, Mercedes Benz and several other varieties of American and European automobiles.

The Stanley Steamer was built by the Stanley Twins, Francis Edgar and Freelan Oscar, true pioneers of Yankee ingenuity. It was surprising to see the many steam-powered cars on hand for viewing. The Stanley, in 1898, gave President William McKinley his first automobile ride. It was the first time any president had ridden in an automobile.

Spectators followed many of the judges for a look under each hood, over each running board, and listened in as exhibitors explained the various functions of their cars. Everyone, including the spectators, nodded their heads in agreement, knowing that what they were looking at was the ultimate in transportation, then and now.

Eye-catching were the microcars, automobiles with engines of one or two cylinders. Some micros had three wheels. At the end of World War II, Europe was in ruins, and manufacturers, short of materials, devised these cars that would not only revive the economy and put people back to work, but were extremely affordable. The general production period for microcars ran from 1952 to 1964.

Also on hand were the concept cars. The Ford Company exhibited a Mercury MC4 that featured bucket seats with integrated special electronic gear such as rear-seat television, and three rear-facing video cameras for improved road visibility so that you wouldn't even have to move your head to watch the road. Incredible!

No matter where you were stationed at the 47th Annual Concours, no matter what display you observed, Pebble Beach was a veritable feast for car lovers. And when a woman with two of the most elegant-looking pooches posed for the press next to a 1933 Lincoln Continental, that was the icing on the cake!

■ Carmel Valley Chamber stages a mixer

The Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce staged a mixer Aug. 12 at the nifty, new Stirrup Cup Banquet Room, which owners Nelson and Jenn Foreman, owners of The Running Iron Restaurant, hope will be a welcomed addition to the valley. They are already booked this week, and that's a fine beginning.

The Stirrup Cup is a cozy looking, knotty pine room with a huge bearskin on the wall. As Nelson was showing us around, he told us that the walls and the floor were original. They demolished a wall at The Running Iron, and the banquet room was born.

"We were in no hurry to open," Nelson remarked, "and our chef, Matthew Farmer, has prepared some samples from our menu for tonight."

Jenn and Nelson Foreman, owners of the Stirrup Cup, welcomed folks to their new banquet facility.

Chamber members Marjorie Loughridge, Pamela Norton and executive director Ann Olivier greet guests at their Mixer Aug. 12.

They were delectable to be sure, and some of the menu listings like chicken and sausage Jambalaya with Creole rice and Jalapeño cornbread sounded mouth-watering.

It was good to see Chamber members Lee Whitney from Wells Fargo, Pamela Norton, Yvonne Bejarano, Adreena Gurries, Randy Randazzo, Ann Olivier and Marjorie Loughridge.

This warm, inviting banquet room can handle parties of 50, so call 659-2189 to book a party, meeting or reception.

SUMMER OF DISCOVERY, SHARING THE WORLD'S WONDERS

Australia, Bali, Bangkok, Jordan, Egypt, Greece, Corfu, Paris and Giverny, France and New England

"For years I have traveled through out the world on my quest of the mastery of light and color. But until now, I never quite made it around the globe. To share the realization of a dream with my two sons, Christopher and Jonathan age 7, both natural artists, was a source of pride and joy. We mixed up fun and discipline, painting and exploring new vistas and returning to the inspiration of Paris and Monet's Giverny. Jonathan at seven, was one of the youngest artists to ever paint at Monet's Pond. The works of art created on this world journey are colored with experience, emotion and excitement.

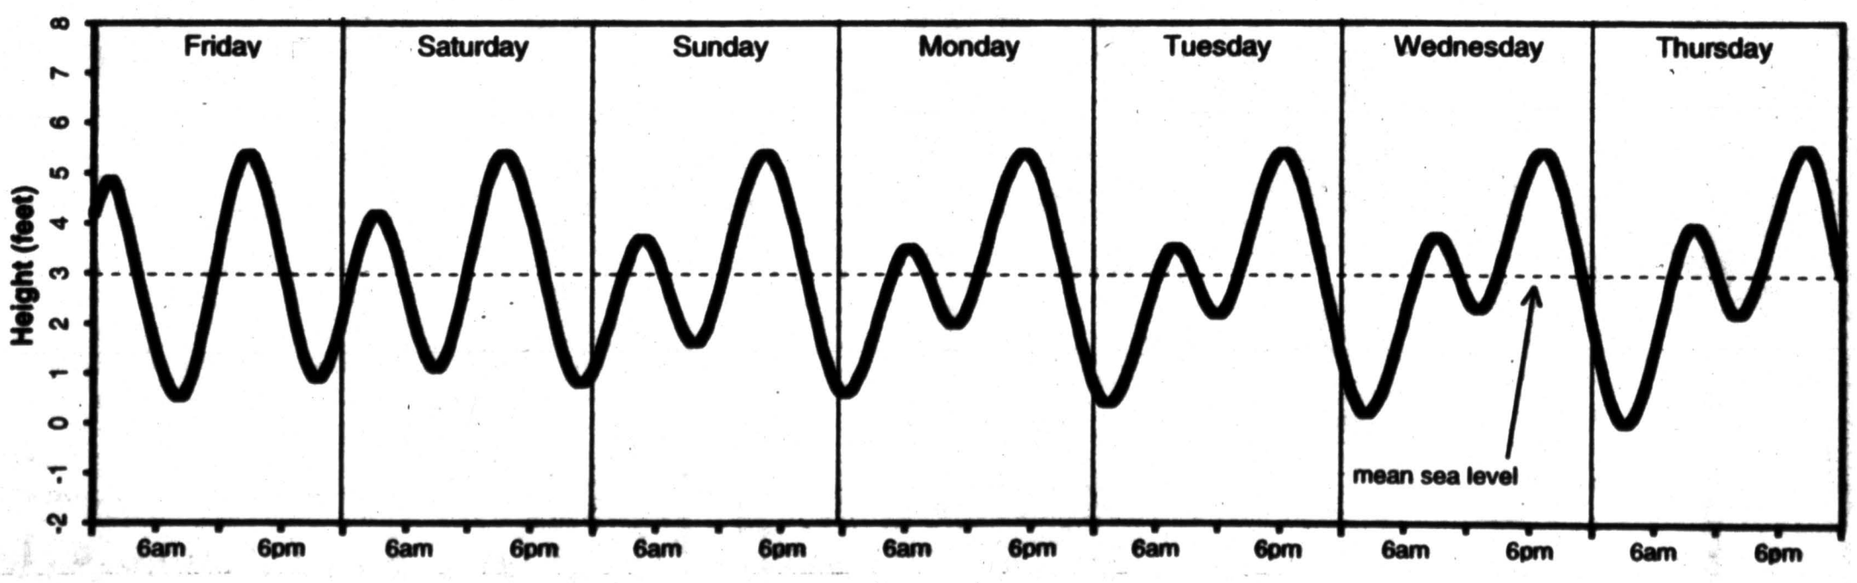
Carmel Bay Tides — August 22 to 28, 1997



• Use this chart to help plan your activities along our incomparable coastline. For example, a sunset campfire at the beach is best planned when there will not be a high tide during the evening hours. Very low tides (especially those below the zero level) provide the best opportunity to explore local tide pools. Fishing is said to be best on days when the tidal variation is greatest. And don't forget that coastal flooding and erosion can be severe when a very high tide coincides with a major storm.

• Tides are primarily caused by the pull of the moon and the sun on earth's oceans. Accordingly, the greatest tides (spring tides) occur when the sun, moon and Earth are aligned (full moon or new moon). When the sun, moon and earth form a right angle tides are smaller (neap tides).

• Every 25 hours there are two high tides and two low tides. "Mean sea level" is the average of all tides and is the same everywhere on the Earth. "Mean high tide" (approximately 4.7 feet on the tide chart) is the average of all high tides and, in California, is the legal boundary between private coastal lands and publicly-owned tidelands.

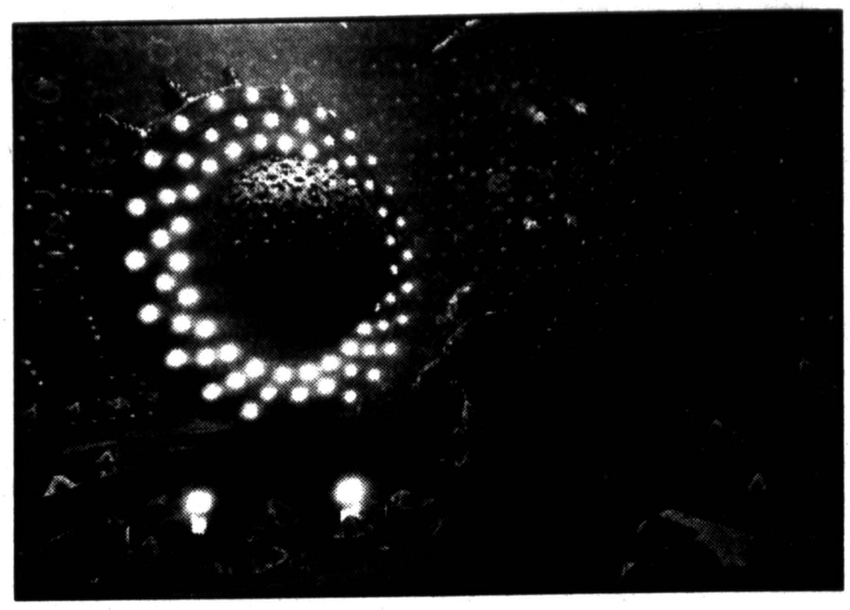
Steel: Shaquille O'Neal stars as a nuclear scientist who becomes the contemporary urban hero, Steel, to stop a competitor, Judd Nelson, from selling weapons to terrorists. An action thriller based on D.C. Comics character. (PG-13) Crossroads Cinemas.

Approaching the third seal



Justin (Jack Noseworthy) approaches the third seal in the second containment of the Event Horizon in the science-fiction thriller, "Event Horizon."

VILLAGE VERSE

STOP GAP

The grass gave me
not a single blade of itself but the breast feather of a buzzard:
short, slightly arced, many such feathers around the apartment of a bird. I held this dull fine-fronded article.
The wind blew it from my hands;
birdless, it flew. I stayed below,
a woman out of fuel.
